Some will be chalk or whiting; some, innocent starch powder; some, arsenic, bismuth and white lead. Some will make you look like the ghost of a working baker, who had no time to wash his face. Some will fill your pores with little blacks; some will poison you; some will hurt your eyesight; some will paralyze your hands. No matter, go ahead; buy them all, plaster them on, and oil or cold cream yourself at night. If you choose you may rub red paint on your cheeks at the same time. In a year or so will come the third stage, in which you will consume all the unitake Smith's Pills, Jones' Bitters, Brown's Tenics, Robinson's Mysterious Human Health Protector, &c., &c. You will try allopathy, homoepathy, the watercure, electricity, magnetism, and all the quack medicines.

You began by being a healthy young woman, with a few pimples on your skin, which would have departed of themselves after a while. You are now an invalid, with a parchment complexion and an unhappy disposi-tion, and one day you look in the glass and discover gray hairs on your head. Nature, finding that you would dose yourself into a pallid ghostliness, tries to do what she can for you by giving you such hair as will point the change less hideously. You feel horrified; you fly to the paper once more, and

You at once go out to buy this compound, which, when bought, proves to be a grimy mixture with a very nasty smell, and so begin upon the hair-dyes, and go on till one day there is an end of all things for you, and out of respect to your memory people call it a visitation of Providence, and not

A Rejected Lover's Revenge.

Taking a seat just behind the happy pair in church, he racked his brains for means of revenge, and looked like seventeen Othellos concentrated in one. Finally a ghastly smile crept over his face, he raised half up in his seat, and nabbed a large black bug that was crawling on a pillar hard by, and gently dropped him down between his unconscious rival's shirt collar and neck, and then calmly leaned back with a virtuous and christian air of satisfaction. The bug soon made his presence felt, and that other fellow began to twitch and scratch himself against the back of his seat and look uneasy, and cast unhappy glances at the minister and affecting ones at the fair being by his side.
