While watching the game, 'tis a whim of the bard's A moral to draw from that skirmish of cards, And to fame yhe finds in the trivial strife. Some excellent hints for the battle of Life: Where—whether the prize be a ribbon or throne—The winner is he who can 'go it alone.'

When great Golileo proclaimed that the world When first or the processed self with field A d got—not a conver—for all of his pains, lim only derision and pricon and claims.

Alas! for the player who idly depends, In the struggle of life, upon kendred or friends, Wentever to evalue of blessings like those. They can never atone for inglororious case. They can take toward who finds with a groun, That his cartches have left him to "go it alone,"

There's something, no doubt, in the hand you may hold,
Health, family, culture, wit, beauty and gold,
The fortunate owner may fairly regard
As, cach in its way, a most excellent card;
Yet the game ma be lost with all these for your own, Unless you've the courage to "go it slane."

In battle or business, whatever the game, in law or in love, it is ever the same; in the strengte for pewer, in the scramble for pelf Let tais be your motto—"RELY ON YOURSLE." For, whether the prize be a ribon or throne, The victor is he who can "go it alone."

THE ANSWER. EY M. M.

I have read, witty Saxe, your last verses on encire, it's a game I have played, though never for incre; And it you but know it as well as I know it. You would find, oh! most genial and excellent poet. It teaches a less on more useful than one. To be be neared from the sentence, "I'll play it

Self-reliance we know is an excellent trait;

Dose we a high place in the record of Fame,
And often in life, as in Euchre, I own,
You make a big march when you "play it alone."

But to "go it alone," you, no doubt, understand, You must hold the big knaves of the pack in you hand,
And, too eften in life, in a similar fix,
You depend on such cards to secure you your tricks:
So that was othing too much of the knave may be shown
In a selfen desire to "go It alone."

But the game you describe as a "trivial strife," flas a moral to point for the lattle of Life; It is this- when the cards are dealt round on the stand. And each player looks auxiously in a his hand, How bravely your partner il-luck can resist, If cheered by the sound of your voice—"I'll assist."

I went to Edinburgh, where I found an uncle, a kind hearted, childless man, who gladly gave me a place in his house, and employed me in his business. Wealth flowed in upon him. I became his partner—went abroad—resided four years on the continent, and finally returned to Scotland, rich, educated, in short, everything but married. everything but married.

One evening while in Glasgow, I was struck by a young lady of unpretending appearance, but whose remarkable beauty and high-toned expression indicated a mind of more than ordinary power. I was introduced but the Scottish names had long been unfaniliar to my ear, and I could not catch hers.

I was fascinated with hor conversation and as continually reminded by her grace and refinement of manner that she was capable of moving with distinguished success in a far higher sphere than that which fortune seems to have allotted her. I am naturally neither talkative nor prone to confidence; but there was that in this young lady which inspired both, and I conversed with her as I had never conversed with the properties of the noth, and remersed with her as I had never conversed with any. Her questions of the various countries with which I was familiar, indicated a remarkable knowledge of litera-ture, and an incredible store of information. Donald Lean and myself were good friends at fourteen years of age, and we both regarded, with little more than friendship, pretty Helen Graham, "our oldest girl at school."

We romped and danced together, and this lasted for such a length of time that it is with feelings of bewilderment that I look back upon the mystery of two rival lovers continuing friends. But the time came as it must, when jealousy lit a spark in my boyish bosom, and blew it into a consuming flame. Well do I remember how and when the "green eyed" perpetrated this incendiary

A Small Capital Required to Run a Large and Paylog Eusiness The capital required is very small, and the profits from it will fully equal that of thousands of merchants who have invested a large capital in their business. Hundreds in all parts of the country are

$1,500 TO $5,000 A YEAR, And hundreds more will date their success from accepting our liber: lofter at this time. Any one willing to work for success can force it, but those who believe it can be had from idleness are not the kind of med we want to push our business. We want A LIVE ENERGETIC AGENT,

As one such is worth a dozen who expect a business to push itself. We have spent in pushing our business ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS. It has paid us to do it, and it pays our agents, as it advertises it thoroughly in every State, County and Township in the United States and Canada—not only for us, but for the Agent. Remember, this is a life business, and that every year it grows larger and larger. We will send to parties contemplating to act use our agents a SAMPLE DOZEN BOTTLES securely packed with our different Posters, Bills, Show Cards, Terms, etc.,

UPON THE REC T OF $2.50. And to all sending $2.55 for Sample Dozen, we will send free of charge, Samples of our Eight Riegan Chromos, entitled: GOOD MORNING! GOOD NIGHT!
