Notes and Comments.

The late Newmarket Courier has changed ame and dress. Under the new proprietorship it bears the impress of energy on the part of its owners. The name is now the North York Reformer, and although we do Mr. Pogue, that the Treasurer is hereby not suppose the object of starting the paper was to injure the circulation of the Era, of six dellars in full, for work done on yet it may have that effect. We wish the owners a succeesful career. We presume however the Conservatives of North York Pogue, that Nathaniel Stephenson's acdo not intend to go without a paper and we count for work and material, and making expect soon to hear of steps being taken to bridge on Richmond Street, be paid by accomplish this end.

The Liberal-Conservatives of Lincoln will hold a picnic in St. Catharines on the 23rd just., at which Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. M. C. Cameron, and other prominent men of the party, will be present and deliver addresses. When is it the intention of the Conservatives of West York to have a pic. nic? or are they so bereft of bluck und spirit that they do not intend having any? No fencing, gentlemen.

termination when a certain sum has been accumulated to retire from the cares of business, and enjoy the balance of his days in retirement on some sunny farm or rural retreat, his vision has planned. This is wrong. You should commence the business of life with the determination to work as long as you live, and you can do this if you obey the laws of health as related to your physical and spiritual nature. Your business, if fitted to your capabilities, will in the doing and right management of it, be to you a great pleasure, an intense happiness, and there-fore should be continued as long as you live in this world. Commencing business with this end in view will prevent you from falling into the feverish, unhappy and short-lived results, that belong to the men who wish to rapidly accumulate a fortune and retire to enjoy These men are not happy while counting their profits, and certainly can-not be happy when they retire to enjoy them; for it is an established law of nature that can in no wise be slighted, that labor is a necessity to perfect growth and true unalloyed happiness. A wise man will never rust out as long as he breathes the breath of life; he will be doing something for himself, his country or posterity. Howard, Franklin, Newheavily.

YONGE STREET SIDE-TRACKS. Single copies, three cents. To the Editor of The Herald.

DEAR SIR,-Yonge Street side-tracks are now deep with dust and full of hard, brocken stones, making these tracks very disagreeable for driving, and hard upon both horses and wheels. The large quantities of these broken stones in the side-tracks, no doubt, drives much of the travel off Yenge Street, as they cause a buggy to clatter and bounce continually and throw up much more dust that if the road were free from them. The motion is very much like driving over a corduroy, and the noise anything but Superintendent that it would pay well to have these good hard stones raked into the hollows in the middle of the road, A man that would work would rake out much more than a man would break of new stone, most of which are soft enough to grind up by the first heavy load pass ing over them.

> "I have no time to read," is a common complaint among farmers. It is true that for a large portion of the year there appears to be but little time for a continuous course of reading, but it's a great mistake to suppose that nothing can be read. Quite as much wal good often comes of some idea caught in an odd moment, and pondered over until thoroughly digested, as that derived from more continued reading. It lightens toil and quickens the brain to thus work out from some slight suggestion a substantial clear defined conclusion. is from the habit of reading and thinking rather than from the time consumed that good is to come. Knowledge is made up of items, which, if taken alone seem insignificant, but when put to-gether form a mine of wealth. The odd moments we are inclined to squander, or devote to physical rest, if properly improved, would soon run into hours and days of incalculable value.

Experience continually contradicts the notion that a poor young man cannot rise. If we look over the list of rich men, we and the pulpit should not be converted into a newspaper office, where advertising is done gratis. Some of our local divines might do well if they took a leaf from Mr. On the other hand, the sons of rich men, we find that nearly all of them began life with little or nothing. To any one familiar with the millionaires of the United States, a score of examples will occur. On the other hand, the sons of rich men. On the other hand, the sons of rich men, who begin life with the capital which so many poor young men covet, frequently die beggars. It would probably not be NEW ROOMS FROM OLD ONES.

My wife, says a correspondent, has a wonderful faculty of making the most of a few thirty in the root of a few thirt wonderful faculty of making the most of a few things in the room, and I have been analyzing her management to see what there is in it that makes everything about the room take on so fresh an appearance occasionally. It is certainly life by others with less capital originally, but more energy, thrift and industry. For these virtues, after all, are worth more than money. They make money, in fact. Nay, after it is made, they enable the possessor to keep it, which rich won processors to be more difficult than men pronounce to be more difficult than the making. The young man who begins life with the resolution always to lay by a portion of his income, is sure, without extraordinary ability, gradually to acquire a sufficiency, especsally as habits of economy, which the resolution renders necessary, will make that a competency for him which would be quite insufficient for an extravagant person. It is really what we save more than what we make, which leads us to fortune. He who enlarges his expenses as fast as his earnings increase, must always be poor, no matter what his abilities. And content may be had on comparatively little. It is not in luxurious living that men find real happiness.

> Everybody says that everybody should be honest; but everybody is not honest either abread or at home. That we should be honest in our trade, weights and measures, dealing with our neighbors and with strangers is also clearly right; that a strong principle of rity should govern us, is just what every man not only admits, but believes and contends for. There is no such thing as, being too honest. Honesty is a virtue better than gold, richer than rubies, more precious than gems and costly trappings. It is a much richer adornment for manhood and womanhood than wealth can purchase or place secure. To be honest is to be like a child and like an angel; and Christ said of little children, of such is the kingdom of Heaven. But we wish to write a word — a strong word-in behalf of honesty. There are many people who are honest away from home. They make home promises only to break them. As husbands they make a thousand and one promises to their wives, hint a thousand good things, and raise many plansant expectations they never seem to shink of again. As wives they practise a thousand little deceits, equivocate many times, when straightforward honesty was just the thing required. As parents, they conceal, go around the truth, deceive, and often aor, tually falsify to their children, when the The children see their parents' double dealings, see their want of integrity, and learn to cheat, deceive and equivocate The child is too often a chip of the old
