Without any practice whatever by either team, eleven of the married men of the village took the field against the same number of single men. There was not time to finish the match, and it will be concluded on Saturday, the 30th inst. At the close the score was as follows: single men 117, and the married men 71, with eight wickets to fall.

The first game was taken by the Maple Leafs in 30 minutes, and the three following games were won by our club in 20, 9 and 15 minutes respectively.

The October number of this Ballous monthly magazine is the best one that has been issued for some months, and so liberally bestowed upon it. From all parts of the United States and the Canadian Ballous's magazine is welcomed because the people know that it is full of just such reading as suits the popular tastes. There are domestic stories, sea yarns, tales of adventures, love stories of the most ardent nature, poetry of rare eloquence, fine illustrations, and a nice array on fashions, with engravings to show how garments look after being made up and worn. We cannot say too much in praise of Ballous's, and hope to see it in the hands of every household in the land.

North York.

A secret session of a very limited number of tricky politicians was held at a certain Hotel in Aurora on Saturday last. The "mountain is in labor."

During the past week a dealer in India Rubber Stamps tried to play sharp on the Royal Hotel, by "shunting" his board bill. His unexpected absence from dinner on Monday, created suspicion, and Mr. McClintock took the noon train to Aurora on a prospecting tour. Remaining quietly on the train, the India Rubber peddler did not observe him, and thinking the course clear, took a seat in the smoking car. Mr. McClintock then stepped up and quietly demanded the amount of his hotel bill: after some reluctance Mr. India Rubber man forked over the "rhino," at the same time uttering some threat about getting even on a future day,—to which the Hotel keeper replied by telling him to pay his bills next time and save exposure.—Newmarket Era.

The first two innings of a match between Carlton and Yorkville were played on the ground of the former on Saturday last; score, Carlton 67, Yorkville 80. The match will be concluded tomorrow.

A match was played between Yorkville and Beavers on the ground of the latter, resulted in favor of Yorkville, by six runs; score, Beavers 55, Yorkville 61.

An Evangelistic Band has recently been formed in connection with the Yorkville Congregational Church. An entertainment under its auspices took place in the church Tuesday. A large number sat down to tea, after which a series of anthems, solos, readings, and recitations were very creditably gone through. The programme throughout was in strict harmony with the objects of the newly organized "Band." The proceeds were devoted to the printing fund. The chair was occupied by Mr. George Hague.

KLEINBURG.

George Robinson was cruelly assaulted on Wednesday last week at this place. It appears he had a dispute with a fellow workman whilst engaged with a thrashing machine, and struck him with his fist. The man whose name is Watkins after being struck went off possessed himself of a heavy piece of wood and lay in wait for young Robinson. During the evening in proceeding quietly along the road Robinson was struck on the back of the head which rendered him unconscious. Watkins has been taken into custody, and young Robinson lies dangerously ill at his father's residence, Toronto.

Tuesday afternoon the case of James Watkins, for the assault committed at Kleinburg last Wednesday on George Robinson, son of Nixon Robinson, of the Globe Hotel, came up again before the Police Magistrate. Mr. Murphy appeared for the complainant, and Mr. Reid for the defendant. The injured man is still in a critical condition, and the object of bringing the case thus early into Court is to meet a movement on the part of the defendant's counsel to have him admitted to bail. The prosecution cited Dr. Agnew, young Robinson's attendant, who testified that although he is getting on slowly he may be able to appear in Court on 25th inst. Mr. Reid pleaded at considerable length that his client be admitted to bail, but this request the Magistrate refused to grant until the result of Robinson's injuries are ascertained with certainty.

Ontario County. Messrs William Long, John Cuthbert, and Louis O'Leary shipped at the Duffins Creek station, on Monday last, twelve valuable general purpose horses, via Grand Trunk for Quebec, and hence by the steamer "Argosy" for England. It is a first venture, and if successful the enterprise will be continued by the parties interested.

The Grangers held a successful picnic at Pickering Harbour on Friday last. There was from twelve to fifteen hundred present. After having partaken of a pleasant repast in Mr. Garner's grove, the party adjourned to the harbour, where the Schooner Belle of Toronto, being towed by the tug Emma Munson, took the party out for a trip on the Lake.

On returning they stopped at the entrance of the piers to inspect the extensive improvements which have taken place. A meeting was then organized on board, and Mr. Forrester, a prominent Granger, called to the chair. Addresses were made by S. K. Brown, Deputy-Reeve, Councillor Gold, and Councillor Chapman.—Witely Chronicle

LANGSTAFF GRANGE PIC-NIC. The following is as full a report of the speeches made at the Langstaff Grange picnic as our space will permit: Mr. David James, Master of Langstaff Grange, on being appointed chairman congratulated them upon the large gathering, and made them progress and was glad of it to give the views of the Grangers, and state the principles of the order. He thanked them for the honor done him for placing him in the position of chairman and called upon R. March Esq., to address them, who on coming forward expressed himself on being proud of the calling of a farmer, commented at some length upon the principles of the order, and the benefits to be derived from joining it, and trusted the "Patrons of Husbandry" would be well supported.

A. J. Hughes, spoke of the social aspect of the Grange meetings upon the farmers and their families. He ridiculed the idea that the society would soon run its course. He showed the benefits to be derived from purchasing instruments that they used in manufacture, and doing away with the middle man. He gave a history of the rise and progress of the order, and the reasons for its commencement. He urged them to be united; they were the backbone of the country; spoke in reference to a Mutual Insurance Company to secure them in case of fire; and expected the time would come when a Granger's Bank would be started; extolled the benefits of education upon the rising generation and the necessity for the farmer taking his proper stand in the community.

Mr. J. P. Bull, spoke of the strength of the farmers in the community, and the great rise and progress of the Grange movement. The institution was a necessity for the farmer, other societies that they had did not meet their requirements, therefore to protect and foster their own interests the Granges were started. It was time that they recognized their position in the country, and that they had a right to be heard, and to make any government, it was their duty to do so. He claimed that they had not their proper representation in Parliament which ought to make them feel humbled. Their sons left the plow and farm feeling that they had not the same chance of rising in the world as some other professions. It is time they had thoroughly considered the question of trade with the neighboring Republic. They could not enter the markets of the States without being met with a heavy duty, both upon their grain and stock, whilst the Americans did not pay any duty when sending their farm stuff over here; an excuse for this was it would not do to levy duties, because it would offend our friends in the Eastern section of the Dominion. He drew an amusing picture wherein he showed that the farmer paid for all, whilst the doctor and minister presided and prayed for all. He held out the advantages to be gained by joining the order, and called earnestly upon the young men to prepare to take their proper standing in the community. The middle men or brokers he believed could be done away with, the farmers felt that had sufficient to live upon to find out the best markets; by passing through many hands the profits of the farmers were lessened. He gave an instance of a sale of a lot of cheese in the English markets, and contended that if the farmer had shipped on his own account he would have pocketed the profits made by the middle men, which amounted to something like $400. The association should find out the best markets, and then the members of it will be able to take advantage of sending their goods direct. In the United States the Agricultural interests were ten per cent. more than the Commercial, and the farmers there are determined not to be ruled or governed by railways. He called upon them to join the association and by that means help to advance their own interests.

J. Lane Esq., M.P.P., was happy to address them to-day; the agricultural interests were not antagonistic to those of any other. The farmers he thought required the assistance of the mechanics as much as the latter did the former. He approved of the movement, if they when they met together discussed agricultural subjects it would be a great gain to them. He entered at length into the subject of Protection, though the farmers did not require Protection, because their fathers had done without it; Protection would be the means of creating more Custom House Offices, which he likened to the middle men, and would cause an increase of the taxes of the country, which of course the farmers had to pay. The Gazette never contained the names of farmers as being bankrupt, and offering a compromise with their creditors of ten cents in the dollar. He would advise all to join the order, although he himself did not belong to the order, but thought after the turnout he saw before him he would become a member. He believed that the farmers were to blame, because they had not sufficient representation in the Legislature; there was too much work about the farm, which drove the young men to seek other professions. After some further remarks of a rather non-committal character, he advised them all to sell and buy for cash.

M. John Duncan as a member of Langstaff Grange, would be glad to hear any remarks from those who might be opposed to the order, and would be glad to make way if any such were present. Dr. McConnell, on being called upon was glad to express sympathies with the objects of the society, he believed the Grangers and Manufacturers could work together and each be of service to the other. He trusted the workers of the soil would claim that position in society that their virtues entitled them to.

ADJOURNED INQUEST. The adjourned inquest on the death of John Turner was held at Proctor's Hotel on Thursday evening last, by J. McConnell Esq., M. D. Coroner for the County of York. Doctor Jackson—sworn and saith first seen the deceased on 6th or 7th inst., deceased came to my house complaining of heavy cold, examined him and came to the conclusion that the cold had formed an attack of pleurisy, saw him once a day until the Sunday following, then advised him that he had better start for home if possible, but did not consider him in a fit state to travel. The main reason that I advised him to move at once was that the tavern keeper seemed opposed to him remaining, told the hotel keeper that I did not consider him in a fit state to travel, prescribed for him such medicine as I thought would alleviate his sufferings during his journey, did not know his name on Sunday the last time I saw him he appeared to be tolerably free of all symptoms of cold, but found him suffering from internal pain in the regions of the heart, breathing was very quick and he was suffering from heart disease made up a mixture that he had been in the habit of getting.

Doctor Brown—sworn and saith was sent for to see the deceased by Mr. Proctor on Monday the 11th inst., and found him lying dead in Mr. Proctor's front room. Mr. Marsh, Mr. Proctor and others were present, seen no marks of violence about his person, had the appearance of a person in want, his face was pale and features placed suggestive of death from a gradual failing of the heart's action from disease rather than from violence the body was well nursed.

On the following day made a post mortem examination on the body in the dead house in company with Doctor Jackson and we came to the conclusion that the cause of death was from what is commonly known as the dropsy of the heart. The jury after hearing all the evidence unanimously concurred in rendering a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony submitted.

not presume to touch upon it, every body had their particular opinions. In conclusion he advised them all not to be afraid of being farmers, or grangers, but educate their families and themselves and follow the principles of the order then prosperity and success will attend them to the end of time.

Mr. Lokes of Newmarket, said it afforded him great pleasure to meet them congratulating them on the splendid turnout. He read over the principles of the order commenting on the same. He advised them to take their proper stand in society and assert their right to have a proper representative in Parliament. He referred to the exportation of cattle to England and that it should stimulate them to raise cattle. Farmers were very badly represented in Parliament. We had too many lawyers. Protection he considered as necessary to the farmers as well as to the manufacturers. He wished success to the Grange movement and particularly to the Victoria Grange, and after an able speech of half an hour during which he was repeatedly applauded.

Mr. J. Manning, on coming forward stated for a long series of years I have waited to see the day that I now see, and am glad all other classes of the community have their associations and why not the farmers? When I was brought up as a child he desired to have anything to do with the Grange movement so long as it was under the protection of a foreign country or the establishment of the Grange under our own control he was the first one north of Toronto to join the movement. The society made great progress and was glad of it for the honor of the agricultural classes. The Reformers and Conservatives pastured on the country stating that this country shall be represented by such an one and we will pull the wool over the eyes of the farmers and make them believe things are all right. When Dr. Gutzwiller brought up a resolution to equate into the agricultural interests of the country he was laughed at, manufacturers would not pull the wool now. The farmer is a reading and thinking man there is nothing to keep his mind from expanding, whilst he is handling the plough he is thinking. He advised them to educate their sons and daughters. He called upon them to show their independence of any other class as they could control the country, the backbone of the country is the farming interests. He did not believe in free trade we might get it when the farmer is brought up as a child of the countries put duty upon our productions, we should reciprocate by a meeting duty for duty, the Government should be compelled to give the farmers Protection. Two years ago the number of Grangers was only 27, now they numbered 523. He would call upon every farmer in the county to join the society, the Grange movement is a mighty power, the country would prosper in their hands because it was for their interest that it should. He made money by joining the movement as he could buy his goods cheaper.
