A fatal accident occurred to a man named John Donnelly, residing near the Highland creek, on Wednesday of last week: The unfortunate man and two others, Musentine Palmer and John White, were cleaning out a well on the property of the last named, in the township of Pickering and was just commencing to restone it. Donnelly being in the bottom, when from some careless management of the two men above, a stone of upwards of thirty pounds weight was let fall and struck Donnelly on the head, scattering his brains in the bottom of the well. It appears that the bucket was filled fully up to the top and perhaps a little over, and in shovelling it off the plank on which it was standing, care was not taken that it was clear before the windless was lowered, and consequently the bucket fell ever and the stone fell into the bottom. The coroner did not think it necessary to bold an inquest.
