THE EAST.

The latest news from the East seems to show that the Porte has accepted Russia's ultimatum of a two months' armistice, with the immediate suspension of hostilities. Servia seems to be beaten to such an extent that the war may be said to be virtually over as far as she is concerned, and the Russian volunteers are leaving her army, and not likely to return to fight for her.

Although the Turks have not entirely ceased fighting, there is very little news about actual hasilities.

Notes and Comments.

The libel suit of Senator Simpson against the proprietor of the West Durham News comes off on the eighth of this

A member of the Nova Scotia Governmenl has been accused of visiting houses of ill fame, and being in a state of drunkenness; The Chronicle (organ of the Government) calls for a change in the Ministry, neknowledging the correctness of the statement. The man's antecedents were well-known; before he ever entered the Cabinet which he has been allowed to disgrace.

The election expenses of the respective candidates in the recent contest in South Ontario has just been published. Mr. J. D. Egar's amounted to $434. 79; and the Hon. T. N. Gibbs to $493. 37. It would be interesting to know what the present members expenses were when he carried the Riding in 1867. We are inclined to think it would make a large fortune for a man with a small family. -North York Reformer.

Just so "Big Push" was his opponent in 1867; and it is said his election ex penses, were over $30,000 on that occasion; rather a nice little fortune for a man with a small family .-

-Conscience is an avenger. It stands at its post ready to vindicate the majorty of broken law; it refukes sin with stern voice, and passes its sentence on the transgressor; it is man's best friend or his dreadful enemy, There is a torture of regret felt for evil deeds, neglectad duties, corrupted minds, and wasted lives, which, in depth and keenness, surpasses all other suffering, It hounts a man everywhere. It is a flame kindled with his soul, which inwardly torments and consumes him, It is an eternal fact that he cannot reject the guardian care of conscience, or escape the pains of its avenging lash. It is a gnawing worm, which secretely preys on his vitals. Though its avenging power may not be felt at once, and though we may sin and seem to prosper, and be absorbed in the engrossing excitements of the world, despise demands upon us until we think we have conquered conscience, it will come and have its debt of us, and it will claim its prerogative; it will rake over the ashes of our indifference, and rekindle the extinguished fire. In some season of thoughtfulness, in some day of disappointment and trouble, when our vanities and pride are thrown down-in some restless hour, when sleep flies from the pillow, when gain and ambition must fail to excite and satisfy the heart, that ontraged friend will rise up and do its office, and lift its avenging hand.

TORDS OF GOLD.

Married people should treat each other like lovers all their lives—then they would be happy. Bickering and quarreling will soon break off all love affairs; consequently lovers indulge in such only to a limited extent. But some people-men and women both-when they have once got married, think they may do as they please, and it will make no difference. They make a great mistake. It causes all the difference in the world. Women should grow, more devoted and men more fond after marriage, if they have the slightest idea of being happy as wives and husbands. It is losing sight of this fundamental truth which leads to hundreds of divorces. Yet ening, one of the men said:

"That was Mr. Tell. But what did many a man will sould his wife who would never think of breathing a harsh word to a sweetheart; and many a wife will be glum and morose on her husthe old lady, in an excited voice—"I'll band's return, who had only smiles and bet a hundred dollars that she say up words of cheer for him when he was her half the night hefore patching that her is suitor. How can such people expect to

How Sultans are Buried 12

A correspondent at Constantinople reports the following conversation with ed mainly by the amalgamation of two distinct stocks; one of which, styled by one who has long been a resident there, and who has an acquaintance with Turk Mr. Griffis, the Yamato, from a province ish life and manners. He says: "And how are the Sultans buried?" I asked.— "I will tell you," was the reply, "what was told me by a Turk among Turks—one who knew and would tell the truth. The dead Sultans have always been buried like dogs. The great thing is to get rid altogether of the idea of a Sultan; for never was there a people among whom is literally carried out the idea that "Le Roi no meurat pas." When it is quite certain that a Sultan is about to die those around him hardly wait for the breath tu leave the body. Most of them run away to be ready to do homage to the new occupant of the throne. Then follows an odd arrangement: All homage is due to the living sovereign; nothing must interfere with that, not even the corpse of the late sovereign. So one or two of his old servants only remain with the body, and when it is quite dead they roll it up in straw matting and prop it up behind the door of his room, to be as much out of sight as possible, and when night falls it is carried of the palace and buried very quietly. No train of mourning coaches here in Turkey—but, then, they never are used in Turkey; no elaborate preparation for the last resting place of one all-powerful a few hours before. sacredness has descended to his successor. To him we turn our thoughts. We Osmanlis could not do as you Franks do—have a grand lying-in-state. We should be wail at the sight, and that would be incongruous with the rejoicing demanded of us on the accession of our states. We have a grand lying-in-state. We should be incongruous with the rejoicing demanded of us on the accession of our states. With us, in fact, a Sultan is nobody-his demanded of us on the accession of our now sovereign, and would be displeasing to him. Therefore the custom of burying the Sultans in this manner has never been interfered with, and it is best so." "But how are grandees buried in Turkey?" I continued. "Ah!" was the reply. "I myself saw the funeral of Ali Pasha, Faud Pacha, and Djemil Pacha, so I can make you understand which express their wants, feelings, and concerns of every-day life, are for what the ordinary ceremony is at the burial of a person of rank. Neither Turkish ladies nor Turks ever wear mourning; that they dispense with. I will tell you about the late Fuad Pasha's funeral, Minister for Foreign Affairs.

Well, he, you know, died in Italy, and his body was brought back to Stamboul lique eyes, long drooping lids, elevated for burial. They dug three different graves for him, because in preparing the first they came upon some animal (a scorpion I believe), and it was thought that Turkish ground (sacred in the eyes of Turks) would not receive the body of he who had died amongst unbelievers. The second grave was not completed when they found water, and again in this way it was believed the earth would not let the body lie there, but the third time no such impediment appeared, and the grave was dug in a hill peared, and the grave was dug in a full within Stamboul, in a desolate place, on a site once occupied by houses and belonging to a mosque; but this great waste place had been devastated by one of those great fires that are so common to Constantinople. In the burial, first of all the body is taken to a mosque. Over the simple coffin of cypress that contains the body, magnificent shawls contains the body, magnificent shawls are thrown, many sent by friends of the dead pasha. Several pashas help to carry the body to the grave, and as the idence. It is not very grand, or even as this is thought to be holy work. You see that a pasha has a respect naid him of a ceremonious burial; but s for the Sultans, they are got ous of sight as spee and quietly as possible.

STREET CAR VAGARIES.

Intelligence of Ants

Referring to the singular sagacity of these little creatures, a story is told of Huber, the younger, who one day took an ants' nest to populate one of those glass contrivances which he used for pink love-letters, the lock of hair, the making his observations, and which consisted of a sort of glass bell placed over the nest. He sat at liberty one part of the auts, which fixed themselves at the foot of a neighbouring chestnut tree. The rest were kept during four months in the apparatus, and at the end of this time Huber moved the whole into the garden and and a few ants managed to escape. Having met the rold companions, who still lived at the foot of the chestnut tree, they recognized them. They were seen, in fact, all of them, to gestulate, to caress each other mutually with their antennae, to take each other by the mandibles, as, if to embrace in token of joy, and then they re-entered together the nest at the foot of the vers apparatus was completly evacuated

The following instance of practical sympathy is related by a Scotch paper: A poor man who had a large family broke his leg, and as he would be for some time destitute of the means of grace, it was proposed to hold a prayer-meeting at his house. The meeting was led by Deacon Brown. A loud knock at the door interrupted the service. A led by Deacon Brown. at the door with an ox-good in his hand, and asked to see Deacon Brown, "Father could not attend this meeting," he said, could not attend this meeting," he said, "but he sent his prayers, and they are out in the cart." They were brought in, in the shape of potatoes, beef, pork and corn. The meeting broke up without the benediction.

The Japanese, v

of that name in Central Hondo, cama apparently from the south, and long before the Christian era were in posses-sion of the southern islands, from which they set out for the conquest of Hondo, which, with Yezo, was peopled by a race contemptuously styled ebishu, or "barbarians," who had descended from the Northeast of Asia, and are identified! with the Ainos, remnants of whom are still found unmixed in Yezo, and are occasionally to be met with in the capital. Mr. Griffis gives a characteristic portrait of one one of these. The complexion is a dark brown; the eyes not set obliquely; the nose low, with rounded lobes; the mouth large; the hair black and abundant, clipped short in front, but falling in abundant masses over the back and shoulders; the beard and mustaches unusually long and thick.

They are emphatically a hairy race, the entire body of the males being sometimes covered with a fell of hair an inch long. The Ainos are the stock upon which the other races have been grafted, and whose language forms the basis of the Japanese of to-day, compelling the numerous words which have been adopted from the Chinese to conform to its own laws of construction, somewhat as taken from the written language, and not from the colloqual, which has never been spoken in Japan. So extensively have these words been introduced that for almost every native word the Japanese have an equivalent Chinese word .-But in common usage the names of things, family relationships, the words most part native words, while the techniphilosophical, and scientific terms cal, are Chinese. The distinctive types of the two races lique eyes, long drooping lids, elevated and arched eyebrows, high, narrow, forchead, round nose, bud-like mouth and pointed chin; contrasting strongly with the round, flattened face, less oblique eyes almost level with the cheeks, and straight noses, expanded and turned up at the roots, which prevail among the agricultural and laboring classes.

The Kaiser's Palace.

A correspondent writes :- I especially noticed in Berlin the extreme case of entrance into the royal palaces, and the very open and thorough way in which the whole thing is shown you. There is a marked difference in this respect between Prussia and other countries. The Emperor William does not seem to have procession goes on every one rushes for sumptuous. But enter it and you at ward to help bear the coffin for a moment once feel that you are in the home of a soldier. It is almost an arsenal, it is so warlike in every way. Old armour and new armor, fragments of shells-the momentoes of battles- models of the different kinds of soldiers in their appropriate uniforms, models of various guns. great relief maps of battle-fields and fortresses - these are everywhere about. Almost all the pictures, too, are martial battle scene after battle scene; some of older conflicts, others of the modern fights in which the Emperor himself is the central figure. I went into the Emperor's private study and library. I saw the chair in which he sits, the desk at which he writes, the pile of despatches awaiting his attention, the books he uses the papers fresh from his hands. It is manifestly a workman's place — this study. The grim old Emperor is evidently no idler. He keeps his land on things. I am told that he is at his table regularly every morning at six. no one can help honoring the fearless old fellow amid such proofs of painstaking

A butterfly two hundred miles at see is certainly a phenomenon, Mr. M. Dasent writes to "Nature," from New Zealand, that on the voyage to that colony his ship was one morning visited by an orange-brown butterfly, which the passengers endeavored to capture, without success. At the time the vessel was two hundred miles distant from St. Paul's Rock, the nearest land.
