Communications.

OUR RULERS—THE OTHER SIDE. To the Editor of The Herald.

Sir.—Your last editorial on our rulers has filled me with sorrow and amazement, and must surely have proceeded from envy and disappointment. Where are the evidences upon which an unfavorable opinion of the men at present in power, could be based? Have we not signs of prosperity everywhere? Is not the farmer prosperous—don't factories abound? Is not commerce brisk and buoyant? and is not every class satisfied with the present, and hopeful of the future? There is no side of humanity darker than ingratitude, and to see men insensible to the merits of those who are so earnestly laboring for the advancement of the country, is enough to make one sceptical as to our capacity for social or political improvement. Admit for the sake of argument that a good deal of money finds its way to the hands of our rulers—well, what then? Is it not money well spent? No wise man ever expects a good article without paying for it; and without this employment of money, how many a village Hamden might have toiled this barren existence in mute, inglorious repose! The ordinary mind may stumble at this vulgar idea of money, but it is only your far reaching intellect that can look forward to results, and secure them. Suppose Seth Huntington and a few others be annexationists, this only shows their superiority to the narrow prejudices of patriotism, and the present state of the Union will go far to justify their preference. And if the Premier can do a stroke of business for a relation or friend, he only evinces a versatility which can look to the affairs of the country—and his own. If the Finance Minister make blunders, does he not magnanimously own them and make more? And if Mr. Mackenzie find himself sinking in cold water, does he not wisely turn to the plans of his predecessors, which he had previously denounced? Much is said about "purity," and we are reminded of the number of Liberal members who have been unseated for bribery; and many comments have been made upon an earnest letter addressed to Mr. Simpson, and lost, without doubt upon the road. With such impertinent insinuations we must deal after the example of the Globe, attack the courts, and abuse the Judges. Is it to be thought of, that the towering flights of the dictator are to be hampered by ordinary men of good and earnest; or that laws are to be observed by men who make them. The domain of politics must be emancipated from the bench, and if Judges are sullied in the contest, upon themselves be the blame. Poor Goldwin Smith shook off the dust of his feet against a people plainly predestinated to ignorance. Alas! what results spring from moments of time? had he remained but a few short weeks until the vigor and eloquence of the Globe's attack upon the bench had appeared then (as Alison frequently remarks) the fate of the world might have been changed. At no time has a greater galaxy ruled a country; their energy is only equalled by their brilliancy, and their purity is even greater than both. In spite of your comments sir, the country will continue to appreciate them, and when that day comes as come it must (for even Troy fell) that Alexander Mackenzie and his coadjutors shall lay down the reins, we shall be presented with a spectacle to which history can offer no parallel. What confusion must seize upon their detractors? when the immaculate chief, like another Samuel shall stretch forth his unsullied hand and say—witness against me this day, whom have I defrauded? of whom have I received a bribe? Whose ox? or whose ass? or whose hog have I taken? And I will restore it you.

I remain &c., CHAMPION. Markham, 4th Dec., 1876.

FROM THE SOUTH. To the Editor of The Herald.

DEAR SIR.—I have waited this long in complying with your request, that I might be able as far as possible to form a correct estimate of what I have found on reaching the "Sunny South." I could, might, and may
