A Fearful State of Affairs. SHOCKING - The Toronto World, of Frilay, gives an account of a "Modern Gehenna," at the residence of a Mr. Harris, in York Township Mr. Harris has an extensive piggery. This fact of itself is sufficient to account for a fair amount of evil smells. Mr. Harris contracts with a number of slaughter-houses for their offal, and this is conveyed to his place and fed to ed by a certain "Liberal Official," connectthe hogs. He also buys all the deceased cd with a certain "Liberal Township," de horses in the city and neighborhood, takes them to his place, boils them in a huge cauland through political prejudice, cut and dron, separates the flesh from the bones, deface certain Bills, announcing a certain packs the former in barrels, and allows the latter to lie around promiscoonsly Church, not a hundred miles from this there is enough to warrant a shipment. Not village, for the purpose of ruining the busnile containing about 200 loads of manure. The component parts of this pile may only be guessed at, but it smells to heaven. A living rivulet runs through Mr. Harris' property. Before it enters his domain it is a tiny brook of spring water, clear as crystal. When it emerges from the foresaid domain a very good attendance at the Lecture the 'Liberal' imprint off the same, in and the beasts of the field with fine instinct

At times in the hottest days and nights houses around had to be hermetically sealed to exclude the stench. Not a window or door dare be left open. An epidemic will vet arise in the vicinity and nothing could prevent its spread. Harris had been a resident three years, and during that time the people hore with him, no one wishing to he the leader in a crusade. There was lots of grumbling but no action. His land was fairly littered with all sorts of abominations, and there did not seem to be the least attempt at keeping it clean. The smell at times was awful. The only remedy was for people to move away and leave Mr. Harris monarch of all he surveyed. This alternative was rather an unpleasant one, as people around there owned their places. The reporter left and communed with himself as to whether there was law to prevent this man Harris and his disgusting gehenna from endangering the health and lives of his neighbors by vitiating miles of atmosphere; whether there was law to prevent him from turning a running stream inio a vehicle for the carrying of filth and fever on its journey; whether it was a perfectly legitimate thing to feed hogs on the offal and refuse of slaughter-houses, and that if there were such laws, how might they be put in motion.
