

ACCIDENT ON THE G. T. R.

The West End Express Thrown from the Tracks—Alleged Escape of Train Hands in Overturned Cars.

A last (Friday) night's Brookville despatch says: The G. T. R. express going west this afternoon met with a very serious accident at the semaphore just east of the North Augusta road. It seems that after the engine had passed a rather sharp curve the track spread, and a number of the wheels were thrown from the rails. The tender went off the express car was pitched down the embankment on the north side, and was smashed into kindling wood. The express messenger, whose name is Edward Allen, had just turned the lock of the safe as the accident happened, and fortunately escaped any injury. His cap was taken off, and his head narrowly escaped being smashed, being protected from the roof of the car by a big trunk, to the presence of which he undoubtedly owes his life. The trucks broke from the rails. It struck the express car and knocked the end off it, and dashed into the field nearly at right angles with the first. A baggage man named Bagarete and a brakeman were in the car at the time, and both escaped with their lives. Bagarete had a number of trunks piled on him, but was only slightly bruised about the chest. The two cars were pitched into the field, the express turning end for end, the baggage car over the end of it and landing at right angles to the track. The passenger car went off the south side and ran into the bank, which rises about four feet there, and turned more than half way over. The mail clerk was not hurt, and beyond some scratches on the side of the car it escaped being damaged. The passenger car was tipped partly over to the south side, the car following it also left the track. The Pullman only left the track, but was not injured, and the dining car did not leave the rails. The only passenger who complained of being hurt was an old lady named Jane Frier, who belongs to Delta. Her injuries were chiefly from the shock and consequent fright. Dr. Moore, one of the company's surgeons, hastened to the scene of the accident and did what was required. A train was immediately despatched from Brookville to the scene of the accident and the passengers were brought to the station. The work of clearing the track was then begun and vigorously carried on under the direction of Messrs. Robb, McGovern and Albin. The almost unbroken escape of the passengers and train hands was undoubtedly due to the Westinghouse air-brakes and to the great strength of the cars.

CAN HE BE TRUSTED?

Alleged Murder of a Christian Girl by Jews to Obtain Her Blood for Passover Bread.

A last (Friday) night's Vienna despatch says: At the great trial which is now proceeding at Nyregheza, in Hungary, the principal Jewish accused has murdered a Christian girl at Tisz-Eszlar to use her blood to mix with his Passover bread, a sister of the girl alleged to have been murdered testified that she spoke to her sister on the afternoon the murder is said to have occurred, and that she saw her hand the principal witness for the prosecution, a Jewish boy named Moritz Scharf, swore that he saw the murder committed in the synagogue before the midday meal was partaken of. The trial is causing extraordinary excitement, and the Christians in the vicinity are terrified by the accused men, and those who attend the trial fear the counsel for the defence when they rise to speak. The father of the boy Scharf is one of the prisoners charged with the crime. The boy, though not legally competent to testify against his father, elected to do so. He told his story with great coolness, but he refused his father's request to speak in his native German, and the elder Scharf declares that the boy would not dare tell a lie in that tongue. The prisoners court and spit at the witnesses, and finally against his father, elected to do so. He told his story with great coolness, but he refused his father's request to speak in his native German, and the elder Scharf declares that the boy would not dare tell a lie in that tongue. The prisoners court and spit at the witnesses, and finally against his father, elected to do so. He told his story with great coolness, but he refused his father's request to speak in his native German, and the elder Scharf declares that the boy would not dare tell a lie in that tongue.

COLLISION AT SEA.

Two British Vessels Collide—Twenty-five Persons Drowned.

A last (Sunday) night's London cablegram says: The British passenger vessels Hurunui and Waitara, belonging to the New Zealand Shipping Company, came in collision off Portland on Friday night. The Waitara sank in two minutes, and twenty-five persons were drowned. The Hurunui immediately launched her boats and rescued sixteen persons, including a lady, a saloon passenger, to whom a sailor who was saved had given up his life belt. Two other saloon passengers were also saved. All the second-class and steerage passengers were lost. The two vessels left London together. On Friday the Hurunui struck the Waitara end on just in front of the saloon on the starboard side. The survivors state that no crash was heard, but that the side of the Waitara gave way like a cardboard. They say most of the passengers might have been saved had a barge and a steamer, which were seen near by, heeded the Waitara's signals of distress. The Waitara was an iron ship of 833 tons, built in 1863. The Hurunui was also an iron ship.

Curious Matrimonial Suit.

A New York telegram says: A rather unique case came to light in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, when Annie Sizor charged her husband with abandonment and non support. She pleaded in extenuation that he was for several years under the impression that he was a happy father, and but recently found that his wife had been patting off on him two children, whom she had taken out of a charitable institution, as they were illegitimate. She had never been married to a mother. He claimed to have procured a divorce from the woman, and exhibited a document which all the legal force in the court could not translate. The justice succeeded in restoring peace, and the couple left the court happy.

She Was There.

Mr. Topnoody walked into the kitchen the other night, when he came home, and at once angrily said to his wife: "My dear, did you tell Mr. Brown that the greater part of our family attended one of those detestable donation parties?" "What did you do that for? You know you were the only one there from this house, and I think you might have some regard for the truth if you haven't any more." "Don't tell me a lie, Topnoody." "But my dear, I—"

"Shut up! I said the greater part of this family was there, and I meant just what I said. I was there, and if I ain't the greater part of this family then this house is for sale and I am ready to lie down beneath the waving daisies."

"What did you do that for? You know you were the only one there from this house, and I think you might have some regard for the truth if you haven't any more." "Don't tell me a lie, Topnoody." "But my dear, I—"

"Shut up! I said the greater part of this family was there, and I meant just what I said. I was there, and if I ain't the greater part of this family then this house is for sale and I am ready to lie down beneath the waving daisies."

"What did you do that for? You know you were the only one there from this house, and I think you might have some regard for the truth if you haven't any more." "Don't tell me a lie, Topnoody." "But my dear, I—"

"Shut up! I said the greater part of this family was there, and I meant just what I said. I was there, and if I ain't the greater part of this family then this house is for sale and I am ready to lie down beneath the waving daisies."

THE TORONTO HERALD

VOL. XXV. RICHMOND HILL THURSDAY, JULY 5, 1883. WHOLE NO. 1,304 NO. 17.

HORRIBLE DISCOBERIES.

Dead Children and Human Bones Found in a Doctor's Cellar.

A MONTHLY NURSE'S PROCEEDINGS. A last (Wednesday) night's Philadelphia despatch says: The police, today found in the cellar of a dwelling on North Fifth street, formerly occupied by Dr. Isaac Hathaway, an alleged mal-practitioner, the bodies of several children and a large number of human bones. Hathaway was arrested in March, 1881, with Rev. Thomas D. Miller, for committing criminal malpractice upon Mary Butler, a servant girl, whose child died. Both were admitted to bail, and Hathaway fled. He, however, returned some time ago, but has never been re-arrested on the charge. Three months ago his wife charged him with brutally assaulting her and threatening her life. She asked for a warrant issued for his arrest, but subsequently withdrew the charge. She told the officials at that time that her husband had performed several criminal operations upon her, and she knew he had performed hundreds of others. Up to 4 o'clock this afternoon two skulls or portions of skulls of infants had been found buried in the cellar of the dwelling. Hathaway is now in the county prison, charged with assaulting a relative. The coroner has judged a doctor at the prison against him.

Lost from Ireland.

Mr. Murphy, Q. C., has been appointed a judge of the High Court of Justice in Ireland.

Mr. Peter Hay, governor of Spite Island Convict Station for 28 years, has been appointed to the governorship of Mountjoy Prison.

Ireland pays no land tax; Ireland pays no house duty; Ireland pays no assessed taxes; Ireland pays no income tax; Ireland ought to be happy.

There was recently a terrible decrease in the number of inmates in the Wexford Workhouse. Contrasting it with the same period last year the numbers were 602 in 1882, and 478 in 1883.

Some time ago the schoolhouse of Dalrymple had to be closed in consequence of an outbreak of fever, and now it has been found necessary to close the National School at Lassy's Bridge, near Castleblair.

The General Assembly of the Irish Presbyterians, which commenced its annual session in Belfast on June 4th. Rev. Dr. T. J. Killen, of Belfast, was the outgoing Moderator, and the Assembly unanimously elected as his successor the Rev. H. B. Wilson, of Crockettown.

The Cork Exhibition promises to be an event of great importance in the annals of the history of Ireland. The display will include the most complete exhibition of the industries and resources of Ireland yet collected within the walls of any building.

The Earl of Dufferin is to pay a visit to his residence at Clonaboy, County Down.

The Scotch Greys now stationed at Cork will be shortly removed to one of the Scotch stations.

The residence of Mr. William Vaughn, situated in Drimadown, near Castlebar, was lately burned to the ground.

The bacon trade in Waterford is much depressed. The price of pick now averages 23 per cent, and from 4,000 to 5,000 are killed every week.

John Lodge, lately a clerk in the employment of the Munster Bank, who was charged at Dublin with stealing the sum of £5,500, has been acquitted.

On May 22nd the body of Wm. Reynolds, a respectable farmer, who had disappeared suddenly about ten days before, was discovered in a pond convenient to his residence, at Walsden-stead, near Athlone.

Mr. James McKewen, contractor, has been admitted into the Royal Hospital, Dublin, suffering from a terrible self-inflicted wound, having first cut his throat and then shot himself in the side with a rifle.

Little Northwest News.

Sleeping cars are now run between Winnipeg and Port Arthur, and are well patronized.

The aggregate pay-roll of the C. P. R. employees on the last pay-day was over $300,000.

The foundations of a new joint hotel and court house at Swift Current, to cost $100,000, are being put in.

Over 600 men are now employed in the construction of a new machine and repair shops in Winnipeg.

The first bonny manufactory in Manitoba has just been established at Dominion City by Messrs. Webster & Hunting.

Many of the farmers around Rapid City have seeded down from 100 to 200 acres this season, and the crop prospects are splendid.

HATCHING EGGS BY STEAM.

An Invention which Two Hamiltonians are Claimed to Advantage.

FOR A NOVEL SPECTACLE. A some months past Mr. F. J. Wilson, of the Willson Sewing Machine Company, corner Queen and Peter streets, and Mr. A. White, foreman of that manufactory, have been engaged in perfecting an incubator which may now be pronounced complete in every way.

The incubator is a square box 4 feet 6 inches long, 3 feet wide and 4 feet 6 inches high. It is constructed with an air cushion an inch wide all around it and a wall of plaster of the same width to prevent radiation of air. The top is a glass sash with the necessary ventilators. There are tin boilers (outside) at each end of the incubator, serving two distinct systems of hot water circulation. The hot water pipes in the interior are covered with blankets, and these drop into open water at the bottom on either side, operating on the same principle as a lamp wick; the blankets remain moist all the time, and throw out the additional heat required for hatching. The eggs are placed in an open drawer with open wire bottom, and are covered with a light blanket. They are turned and allowed 20 minutes in exposure to the ordinary atmosphere every day. The first experiment by Messrs. Wilson and White was very successful, and they attribute it to the sudden stoppage of the water in this season were of a nature almost to puzzle a hen herself. The second test promises to be all that could be desired. Three weeks ago last night, several dozens of common store eggs were put in, and this morning the elegantly dressed, fat little shells at a lively rate. Two heavy looking birds walked out soon 9 o'clock, and hundreds of others will soon follow. Messrs. Wilson & White have applied for a patent for the incubator.

Those who are fond of rhubarb are reminded that it may be canned for winter use in the same manner as fruits. If this has not already been done, the winter's supply ought to be put up at once, as the gathering should soon cease, and the plants allowed to grow and gain strength for the product of next spring. In canning, the rhubarb is stewed as if for the table. Sugar may be added or not; it is not necessary for its preservation, but many think it is more palatable when added. The sugar is used, in order to properly incorporate the sugar. The hot rhubarb is filled into the jars in the same manner as stewed fruits, and the covers put on at once. Before placing away, try if it is possible to scorch the rhubarb at this season, select the newest stalks, as the outer and older ones are apt to be tough.

Maple Wood "Tins" for Butter.

Mr. W. Cluxton, of Peterboro, writes to the farmers, cautioning them against using tinnets or tubs made from maple wood, for packing butter in. This wood, he declares, injures the butter, that different brands of maple wood are not equally objectionable for butter packing; but dealers here and in the West prefer tinnets as a more convenient package than the clumsy firkin which prevails in the neighborhood of Peterboro. We should prefer to see the Western farmers use ash tinnets with slip cover, rather than ash firkins.

It is, of course, superfluous to say that the better classes of Brazilians are always decently and even elegantly dressed, from boyhood, yet the children of the most wealthy are sometimes introduced to visitors without any clothing but a string of beads around the neck or a pair of elegant slippers on their feet, while in the photographic gallery one can find new pictures of any but the noblest. Among the lower classes boys are frequently never dressed until they are 12 years old. Girls commonly wear clothes sooner, though the first few years of their lives pass their way in the care of their mothers.

Many farmers keep the cattle and sheep they intend to send to market on the approach of winter in scanty pastures during the entire summer, where they remain in very poor condition for want of sufficient food. They keep themselves and their teams hard at work during the summer raising corn to fatten them. That corn is an excellent kind of food to feed cattle and sheep intended for slaughtering will admit. It is likely, however, that most western feeders give too much attention to corn and not enough to grass. It is easy to render cattle and sheep reasonably fat on grass and clover alone. They must, however, be abundant and of good quality. If animals are obliged to be on their feet all day and night, they will not be able to fatten. The proper position of the body is of the utmost importance for the proper circulation of the blood, and many disturbances in the organisms have been traced by simply placing the bolster in a different point of the compass from that it had occupied. Let such as has hitherto been in the habit of sleeping with their heads where their feet ought to be take to heart the example of the late Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Rural Jottings that Are Timely and May Be Read With Profit.

BEST MEANS OF FATTENING CATTLE.

Putting Up Butter and Packing Apples.

The varieties which have done best for the English market have been Gravenstein, Ribston pippin, Pomme Grise, Baldwin, Spitzenburg and Russet.

Those farmers who have not yet adopted the ensilage system of preserving green food for winter use, and who use roots instead, should bear in mind the claims of parsnips as a cattle feed. It is one of the most nutritious of roots, and can be grown without more trouble than carrots. We have never had milk cows increase in milk or extra feed than when a peck of parsnips was added daily to their rations of hay and grain. Parsnips may be sown any time in June, if the ground is fitted, as always should be for root crops, by being deeply ploughed, well manured and finely pulverized. They should be sown in drills about fourteen to eighteen inches apart, and the seed covered about half an inch deep. When two or three inches high thin to six inches apart and keep well hoed. Do not cut the roots, but allow them to remain in the ground until spring, and when the beets, mangels, turnips, small potatoes and the like are all consumed, and the "spring appetite" of the animal begins to crave the green grass which has not started, then dig your parsnips and feed them out. The great advantage of the parsnip is that it will winter perfectly well in the ground, and will be in its best condition at a season of the year when the animal most needs roots, and when other varieties have either decayed or lost much of their value as feed, if indeed you have been able to keep them.

Other Farm Jottings.

There are 2,000,000 hives of bees in the United States.

Sprouts should be thinned out whenever new branches are not needed.

Clover does not exhaust the soil and is the only crop of which this can be said.

Harness should be oiled three or four times yearly, after first being cleaned with soap and water.

It is said that a tomato plant in each hill of melons and squashes will keep the bugs at a respectful distance.

A few sunflowers should be grown near the house, as they absorb the poisonous miasma arising from offensive manure.

Plums can be grown with a greater degree of certainty than other fruits, if the trees are frequently jerryed and the curculio destroyed.

A fruit grower says it is a good plan to trim trees high and pasture orchards with sheep. He prefers it to ploughing or moulching.

A leading Western New York orchardist says that last year he gave his orchard a top dressing of manure in August, and that the result was a fine crop. He thinks the summer manuring produced an immediate effect on the swelling and ripening processes.

It is said that the Russian sunflower has yielded as high as one hundred bushels of seed to the acre. It is wished to turn it into oil for kerosene. It is said to be planted from the middle of May until July 1st, about half a peck per acre being required.

If the horn of a buck or other animal is found to be growing in a way not desired it may be changed by scraping with a knife on the side which it is wished to turn its growth. The scraping should be done on the horn, while on the opposite side growth continues without interruption.

Where land is covered with weeds it seldom or never pays to let them grow for the purpose of ploughing under as green manure. Almost all weeds are robbers of fertility, and only help the soil by being turned to decay at an early stage as possible.

Few farmers know that clover is one of the best crops to clean out weeds from their soil. Its rapid growth enables it to smother all except the strongest rooted perennials, and even these it will greatly keep in check. But it will only do this if cut and other stock are kept off at all times.

"About the Paradise Called Dakota." "The story of Dakota," says the Chicago Tribune, "has been too highly colored; the emigration business has been overworked; the excitement is about over, and now comes the relapse. Dakota is, no doubt, a good place for wheat growing purposes, and is just the place for the poor foreigner from Sweden or Norway, or any other cold country in Europe, to settle in; but the climate is too severe for a man who has been reared anywhere south of the fortieth parallel of latitude. As a matter of course on the part of the geographers, Dakota is placed in the 'temperate zone,' but when well twenty feet deep are frozen over, and winter sets in about the 1st of October with a coldness that defies the registry of Fahrenheit, and continues till May, it might as well be called a cold section of country. From a letter written to the Aledo (Ill.) Record by Mr. Thomas S. Sharpe, who has been a resident of Hutchinson County, Dakota, for the last five years, some facts may be gathered which will lighten the eyes of those contemplating settling in that Territory. We quote some extracts: 'Persons East will do well to accept with caution reports about Dakota. They appear mostly written by persons who have never raised a crop or seen one raised. North Dakota is a wheat region. South Dakota is not, and between is debatable land. I have not seen a crop of wheat of twenty-five bushels per acre; have asked old settlers, and they have not. Last year the Department of Agriculture made the returns for wheat in Dakota Territory, and the result was that the wheat crop was only 14 bushels per acre. It takes five acres of prairie to produce a steer for stock and summer is the best time for laying on fat. By paying more attention to grazing and less to corn farming, we can make beef and mutton for less cost than most of them do under the present system of feeding.'

Many farmers keep the cattle and sheep they intend to send to market on the approach of winter in scanty pastures during the entire summer, where they remain in very poor condition for want of sufficient food. They keep themselves and their teams hard at work during the summer raising corn to fatten them. That corn is an excellent kind of food to feed cattle and sheep intended for slaughtering will admit. It is likely, however, that most western feeders give too much attention to corn and not enough to grass. It is easy to render cattle and sheep reasonably fat on grass and clover alone. They must, however, be abundant and of good quality. If animals are obliged to be on their feet all day and night, they will not be able to fatten. The proper position of the body is of the utmost importance for the proper circulation of the blood, and many disturbances in the organisms have been traced by simply placing the bolster in a different point of the compass from that it had occupied. Let such as has hitherto been in the habit of sleeping with their heads where their feet ought to be take to heart the example of the late Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Congregational minister, who died in the hospital from the effects of swallowing a couple of false teeth. He accidentally swallowed two false teeth, and on the advice of a medical man was taken to London. He was admitted to St. Bartholomew's Hospital where he was attended to, but he died. Death resulted by percolation from a small abscess which had formed in the throat caused by the obstruction.

Dr. Eiseh-wester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years. The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper posture.—London World.

A country cousin visiting her society aunt was asked if she was fond of the opera. "Oh, yes," she said passionately. "I am always perfectly carried away with delight when the lady rides round the ring and jumps through the hoop!"

The perils of false teeth are illustrated by an incident on the body of John Richards, aged 25 years, a Cong