Among the society women of London is an old lady, 85 years of age, who is quite a wonder.

THE FASHIONS.

White is very much worn. Shot silks and satins will rage in the fall. Polonaises are much worn; so are stockings braided in pearls.

THE FASHIONS.

Belts are worn quite narrow. They are fastened with ivory buckles, oxidized silver, cut steel, or stamped leather.

India chuddah shawls of small size, in ivory white and cream, also in pale blue tints, are favorite wraps for the piazzas summer evenings.

Birds are in active demand among milliners. They are used for trimming summer hats, and promise to be a popular garniture during the autumn.

Dressmakers are now employing padding just below the waist line in every dress. This does away with the necessity of a bustle, and is more comfortable as well as more convenient.

THE FASHIONS.

One of the most novel arrangements for the neck is a plaiting of lace sewed down one side of a narrow band, reaching from throat to bust, with a succession of loops of "baby" satin ribbon, or rows of velvet down the other, forming a heading.

We heard the following a few days ago which is very appropriate for these warm days, when suffering from heat, we resort to all manner of beverages to keep cool.

A certain wealthy old gentleman, living here, who was very much of a business man, and a child in regard to slang and new-fangled fashions, was once invited to a worthless nephew, who had not seen for some months. Meeting him unexpectedly, the old gentleman inquired of the vagabond:

THE FASHIONS.

Well, Robert, what are you doing now?—Asking about the bread of idleness, as usual?—No, sir," was the reply. "I've got steady employment at a very laborious business."

THE FASHIONS.

"What is it?"—"Emplying schenors."

THE FASHIONS.

"You do not do with them?"—"I know, but it is better than loafing around the saloons and doing nothing," replied the uncle, who really imagined that his nephew was hired as a longshoreman in lightening vessels, and putting his hand in his pocket to bring out ten dollars, which he bestowed on his graceful nephew to encourage him to cultivate habits of industry.

THE FASHIONS.

"Yes, we find a great many babies," said the conductor, as he looked over the contents of a lady's purse which he had found on a seat in the next car.

THE FASHIONS.

"What do you do with them?"—"I turn them over to the chief baggage-man at the end of the trip. There is always a fuss kicked up, and he generally finds owners for things. Yes, many people are very careless when travelling. They leave all sorts of articles in the cars—pens and umbrellas often. I am sure you have the old yarn about the man who got on the train and felt as if he'd forgotten something. After the train had started, you remember, he happened to think he'd left his bag sitting in the depot waiting-room.

THE FASHIONS.

Well, I had a real case about as bad as that last spring. A man and woman put their baby to sleep on the seat behind them, and when they reached their destination a lot of friends met them and carried off their bundles and traps, but everybody forgot the baby. A telegram caught up at the next station, and the agent took care of the little chap until the careless father came with a huffy. Some people would forget their heads if they weren't fastened on."

THE FASHIONS.

SKILL IN THE WORKSHOP.—To do good work the mechanic must have good health. If long hours of very heavy work, or if he is over-fatigued his hand or dimmed his sight, let him rest once, and before some organic trouble appears, take plenty of rest. His eyes will be rejuvenated, his nerves strengthened, his sight renewed, and his whole constitution built up to a higher working condition.

THE FASHIONS.

The most humble of the civil functionaries of the French Republic are the naval ones. There are some hundreds of them, and their importance is only recognized by the State, which supports them. The French naval cadet enters the service in his kitchen, and spends the first year or two of his active career on board a man-of-war, where he is berthed in the hold and permitted to devour whatever he can catch. A telegram caught up at the next station, and the agent took care of the little chap until the careless father came with a huffy. Some people would forget their heads if they weren't fastened on."
