LASKAY.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sir, - Will you please be kind enough to allow space in your paper for the following: I was thinking as I sat down to night, that some, especially one, needed some gentle reproof. I think that the last correspondent for the Aurora Herald interferes just a little too much, and ventures too far into and about the private business of his neighbors, my, and his own kindred. His ill-will seems to point to one young man in the neighborhood, and this same young man bears his own name, and more, is his nephew. Of course, we know what mean spirit prompts it, the little word (malice) I suppose the young man has too much respect for the grey hairs of age to refute it in the language it deserves, so I, a mere looker on, will make a feeble effort to take up the cudgel in his defence. I think it degrading to his own respectability to try and disturb the quietude of a household where there are just two young people, particularly when those two mentioned have neither father nor mother to counsel or defend them. I think when a person lets their evil nature predominate so far as to try to turn against their best earthly friend with malicious falsehoods, has lost all sense of honor. I would advise him to let this young man go his way in peace in the future, and with these few remarks I will retire.

Can Deafness Be Cured? Mr. John Clark, of Millbridge, Ont., declares it can, and that Haggard's Yellow Oil is the remedy that cured him. It is also a specific for all inflammation and pain.

The Route to Take

The War, a thoroughly independent journal and not particularly favorable at that towards Sir John and his Government, thus writes in regard to what has been so often quoted by both the country and city press upon the question of sending the troops to the North-West by our own road. - "We cannot help thinking that our Government did right in determining to send the troops over our own road, though many are disposed to blame it for that decision. Difficulties might have arisen at Washington, and the result might have been complications and delay. Rebellion is a domestic affair which should as much as possible be dealt with at home, and not brought more than is absolutely necessary under the cognizance of foreign powers. Facilities for the transmission of troops were offered to England by the French Emperor at the time of the Indian Mutiny, but, though not unwelcome in themselves, were on principle declined. Nor is it easy to say when a rebellion reaches the proportions and dignity of a civil war, interference in which, whether by direct assistance or by granting facilities, foreign Governments are bound to abstain. If the American Civil War had extended in this direction we certainly should not have allowed the Federal Government, though it regarded itself throughout as engaged in the suppression of a rebellion, to move troops over our roads. The Government at Washington at present happily is friendly, which it would not have been had the choice fallen on Blaine or Logan, the latter of whom especially is an Anti-British demagogue of the most pronounced and blatant kind. We can trust Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bayard for the steadfast enforcement of international law against Fenians, or any one else who may attempt to violate it to our injury, as well as for the ready concession of everything which we have a right to claim. But we must beware that we do not presume too much on their good-will or place them in any equivocal situation. The Irish vote is still strong, stronger even in the imagination of the politicians than it is in actual fact. This alone, however, the Government might defy. But if with the Irish were combined the bulk of the Republican Party acting in the interests of Fenianism, and the Western Democrats who are incensed at the loss of their spoils, the position of Mr. Cleveland and his colleagues might become one of serious difficulty."

War between England & Russia is sure - if not already declared. The Canadian route should be at once finished to the Pacific. It may be of great benefit to the mother country in an event of the kind. We see in our own case the necessity of the road and desirability of having it completed without delay. How would it do to ask assistance of the Home Government in the matter? It is certainly worthy of consideration, and having a transcontinental route through British territory in case of War in the East, would, we take it, prove profitable and useful to the British authorities.

The New York Tribune says that the Prince of Wales has done a plucky thing in visiting Ireland at this time with his wife and son. There was real danger that harm might come to him or them. All over the United Kingdom his courage has been applauded, and he has doubtless rendered his country a lasting service by warning a good many Irish hearts to greater loyalty. It is entirely possible that the influence of his visit will not be seen in the political relations of Ireland and the rest of the British nation; but underneath the surface it will work to strengthen the allegiance of the average Irishman to the crown.

W. C. T. U. Union Items. The first W. C. T. U. in Ontario was formed in 1874. In 1884, there were 95 Unions and 2,000 members. MR. HOWLAND'S OPINIONS. Mr. W. H. Howland, well-known as a leading Temperance man, when spoken to on the subject of the Scott Act, said: - "I noticed what Ald. Davis said to a Globe reporter respecting the use of beer tending to do away with the evils of intemperance. In England Lord Brougham introduced the Beer House Acts, but the increase of drunkenness which followed was so terrible that Lord Brougham himself had to ask for the repeal of those acts. The fact is that beer can be made of any strength, and in favor of beer, the result would be simply that beer would be produced of sufficient strength to gratify the taste for stronger liquors. Beer does make people drunk, and England's experience shows that there is no drunkenness so harmful as the scotch, sodden, brutal intemperance produced by beer. So far as I am concerned, I would as soon drop the agitation for the temperance reform altogether as to simply change the shape in which drunkenness would be possible."
