Examination Fees.

To the Editor of the Herald: In your issue of last week is a short and East, by Railway, arrives at 10.00 editorial referring to fees required of candidates for Examination, and as the article may cause some misaprichension. you will kindly allow me a few remarks thereon. In the first place no one is compelled to take this Examination. It is an Examination for entrance to a OFFICE HOURS - 7 a. m. to profession, a profession ranking second to none. Every profession requires an entrance fee of these who service to be none. Every profession requires an entrance fee of those who aspire to become members. Ours is thelowest of all -is barely enough to pay for the cost of examining the papers of candidates. The leading fault found by those who have entered the profession for life, is it is not large enough, that it does not serve as a check to the indiscriminate rush into the profession by every Tom, Dick, and Harry, who is anxious to earn a few dollars as easily, as possibly, and with the least possible soiling of bis dainty white hands It is because of this that our profession is lowered in public estimation. What else is to be expected when these teachers (?) are known to go to school, put in their time 6 hours per day and spend their evenings sitting on someone's counter or gallanting about, making little or no effort at self improvement, openly and shamelessly neglecting to qualify themselves for the proper discharge of duty? Is it any wonder that the profession generally is discredited and that ambitious ones are making it a stepping stone to something higher? In the legal profession one cannot enter the preliminary examination till he hands over a fee of about $50. What is the result? No one thinks of entering who does not intend to follow it up for life. Hence it is an honored profession. We claim that our profession should be just as honored as it is honorable, and unworthy, and indifferent parties should be barred out, and something in the shape of higher fees is one of the needful steps in that direction. I repeat, no Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce st.) where advertising contracts may be made for tin mew work | Fees are required at all examinations one is compelled to pass the examination. nowadays, University, Medical, Legal. Every locality has some peculiar fitness for an industry that would flourish and prosper, if some one of ability would start it. People should assist home industries by taking stock in them instead of pouring cold water on the schemes. The first investment may not prove so successful as one would wish but that need not deter persons from forming others as it must pay in the end.
