A Wrestle With the Pots.

The following is an extract from a letter from an in.nate of Packer Institute, Brook Ivn :

You know they fit us for life here-teach us French, ceramics, music, and housework. To-day I took my first real lesson in house-Heretofore I had a taste of it in be work. work. Heretofore I had a taste of it in be-ing detailed to pare apples for half an hour after supper. To-day I was "called off"— that is, instead of working regularly after supper at the apple business, I had to take another girl's work after dinner. It was my first experience with what the girls call "the black artillery," and may it be my last ! The "black artillery," you must know, are great black iron steam-kettles in which they cook our meals. There are six of them. They are ugly-looking vats. They had been used for dinner, and of course they had to be cleaned. I had never seen the girls cleaning them and I hadn't the remotest idea how the thing was done. I was too proud to ask. So I set to work with two mops, an iron disheloth, a dish towel and some soap. The things are so deep that I had to balance myself on their rims. With heels waving in the air, every now and then I made a frantic dip at the bottom. The result of these gymnastics was a smutted apron, a sprained back, and a very unsettled temper.

When 1 got through diving into the ketthe, I tried to regain my cquilibrium. Shades of misery! My luckless heels cap-sized a great pail of dirty water used for cleansing the vat. This brought the ma-tron down on me in the "shake of ago at's She ordered me to mop it up instanter, and not to track around in it; and I was actually forced to come down to the indignity of mopping up that dirty, greasy stuff. I flopped around wildly with the pail and mop for about twenty minutes, but my spirit was broken. I was ten minutes late for hall, having worked like a slave for an hour and a half and got one kettle pleaned. Wild horses couldn't have dragged me back to attack the other five.

However, I have had two consolations. One is that I had seventy five minutes plus time, and the other is that I left the pipe all stopped up with grease. 1 had to ladle out every drop I put into the kettle. When they go to cook anything there'll be a flood big enough to float everyone of the miserable things off to Jericho. One of the rules of the institution is an enforced half hour of mediation in a closet every afternoon. don't think I ever spent a more joyous thirty minutes.

We have a housefull of visitors, among them a young Englishman and his wife, who have come on from India to finish an education for missionary life. They have been here about three years. He expects to graduate from the Boston university in a year more, and then they will return to In-cia. Meanwhile, she will remain here partly as a scholar and partly to learn how to conduct a girl's school. It scens to strange to have a married woman in classes with us. She is a thin little creature, with the worried, anxious, deprecating face which all missionaries' wives seem to wear. The Rev. Joseph Cook lectured here about a week ago. I never heard such lecturing in my life. I was just completely spellbound. The faculty was so dull of compre-hension that they thought he meant them, but the girls knew better. He meant us, didn't le?

An Interrupted Wedding.

A most remarkable hitch took place at a wedding ceremony in the town of Aastad, Minn., which is thus described by a correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press : large party of friends had assembled at the house of one of the town's wealthy farmers to witness the ceremony of a couple about to The Lutheran minister was to be married. perform the rites, and in accordance with the rules of the church asked the groom if he was heart-free. "Yes," came the an swer, when the company were thrown into consternation by the voice of a young lady present. "You lie, sir," cried she, in ac-cents not to be mistaken The words acted like a bombshell thrown amongs the former happy throng, and when the minister asked for an explanation, letters were produced to prove that she was also engaged to the young man, and the affair looked rather critical for the time being. The rejected sweet heart, however, after expostulation, consented to the ceremony being performed, if the gentleman woul 1 applogize and ask to be forgiven, which he humbly did; but the minister had by this time left in disgust, and trouble again stared them in the face until a justice of the pcace was found among the invited guests, and the fond lovers were made one according to the laws of Minnesota.

the world could not afford to part with. This lady paid the rent of more than 150 families and distributed among the poor over $20,000 a year. Every case of deserving charity which appealed to her for assistance received prompt attention. The Philadel-phia Times states that "she employed a wo man to institute inquiry into the needs of cach applicant, and once every week dis-pensed groceries, elething, and money to the poor, who gathered every Tuesday in the rear of her residence. Although a strict number of the Roman Catholic church, no discrimination was made on account of re-ligion." There are few who have the means of doing as this gool woman did, and most of that few lack the inclination. We are aware that "comparisons are odious," but one can not help contrasting the life of Mrs. Drexel with the empty frivolous existence of the average society lady.

To Women Who Want to Write.

It requires a certain type of ability to be a successful newspaper writer, says the Bos-ton Herald, and the woman who wants to turn from sewing because it doesn't pay to writing because it does pay shows herself utterly unappreciative of the work. Newspaper correspondence is not a trade, a me-chanicism, an industrial pursuit, to be chosen on the ground of its being a remunerative vocation. Like all forms of literary work, it chooses its votaries to a degree rather than waits to be chosen by them. If a woman is born with a talent to write she will write -- there is no possible doubt about that.

The President's Sister.

The Philadelphi Times says : While President Arthur has been commended from the time of his accession to the presidency as the most faultlossly dressed man wherever he appeared, his sister, Mrs. McElroy, and her daughter appear to be indifferent to mat-ters of personal adornment, and prefer great simplicity in dress. Although as ladies of the White House they are always the "ob-served of all observers," when they appear in society they are invariably the most plainly dressed of any ladies seen at an entertainment. They have attended most of the large parties in Washington recently, and Miss McElroy, who is a debutatty, and Miss McElroy, who is a debutatte, appears greatly to enjoy dancing. Mrs. MeElroy always wears black or black and white.

She Didn't Dic.

All in the fashionable world, says London Life, will remember that some months ago a charming and accomplished young lady met with a frightfui accident through her dress catching fire. So severe were her injuries that life was despaired of, and the officiating clergyman of a well-known West end church was sent for to administer spiritual consolation to one believed to be mori-bund. To him the lady said : "As I know that I am dying, I have a secret I will dis-close to you only. I love you with my whole heart." The prompt reply was: "You must not die, but live to be my wife." I am glad to add that this week the lady was married to the object of her affections.

A Jalling that Women Can't Fill.

A great deal, observes the Boston Journul, has been said of late in the interest of those very delicately-constituted women who can not submit with equanimity to the operation of having their new shocs tied on for them by the male clerks at the shoe stores. It has been suggested that yourg women be employed in these establishments for such purposes. But the insufficient physical power of women would evidently prevent the application of this reform, for anybody who has tried it knows that the process of putting on ladies' shoes requires an immense expenditure of muscular force. This fact is chargeable to the well-known habit of women with No. 5 feet crowding in No 3 shoes, and protesting that the same are "miles and miles too big" for them. A muscular clerk- and it is noticeable that shoe-store clerks are very powerful in their arms-can aid and abet this deception by using the strength with which he has hapnily been endowed, but a young woman clerk ould be obliged to recommend a shoe the size of the buyer's foot, and thus lose to the store a great amount of custom.

A Model Woman.

man can't have any fun in all that state.

The question as to who is the handsomest woman in America is still in dispute, but thousands of girls believe that if it wasn't for their freckles they'd justly be entitled to that distinction.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton advises billiards for girls. Elizabeth would nevertheless be shocked to see a girl come home with the front of her dress all chalk, and bearing an odor of strong drink.

No wonder the matrimonial associations died out. It is almost too much to ask a young man to fall in love with a girl in an india-rubber overcoat and gum shoes. And yct the girls are compelled to wear them.

The queen of Servia writes all her husband's letters while he plays billiards. There are not many wives in this country who would do that much, but we can paint out a few who make it a point to read all their husband's letters. And wise women they are, too.

A Washington lady went to a 12 o'clock breakfast, then to a 2 o'clock lunch, next to "tea" from 4 to 6, then to a dinner at 7.30, and afterward to arecention, and finally to a german. When she got home she found her husband rocking the cradle with one hand and trying to darn his stockings with the other.

The young lady of the adjective was standing on the depot platform recently, and casting a wistful glance across the barren fields, sighed wearily : "It is just really horridly awfully mean that such charming, lovely fun on the deliciously smooth ice should be destroyed by the hateful glare of a scorching sun.

"No," exclaimed Mr. Penhecker, "No, "No," exclaimed Mr. Fennecker, 199, madam, I object most decidedly. Once and for all I say it—the girls shall notbe taught foreign languages." "And why not, pray?" said Mrs. P., with withering sarcasm. "Besaid Mrs. P., with withering sarcasm.
