ON A TOUR.

The twelfth was a big day here; big in some respects, big crowd and a big noise. From eight to ten thousand people were in town, and I presume they all got what they came after. The morning opened dull and rainy, but it is hard to put a damper on the spirits of those who swear by King William. The Collingwood lodge was astir early, and at each incoming train, it marched down to meet the brethren from other towns and lodges. In they came by hundreds from Alliston, Meaford, Barrie and other places. They cheered and shouted, and waved their hats, and commemorated the "Glorious Twelfth" in their own way. It was not such a bad way after all; certainly the most respectable Orange display we ever witnessed. There was a grand "march past" in the afternoon; twenty one lodges with their banners, those from the towns making a very nice appearance, while many of the country lodges were anything but attractive. They were not unrespectable, but there was no taste displayed in dress, every one decking himself according to what seemed right in his own eyes, and the result was all the colors of the rainbow, without its harmony. Ah! but their music, that took the cake. You have heard the Salvation Army with its drums and tambourines; imagine nineteen such small armies, (two lodges were headed by bands) with a double accompaniment of drums, with fifes instead of tambourines, but too much drum and not enough fife, some lodges having three drums and one fife, then imagine these fife and drum bands about six rods apart and nearly all going at once, and as a last effort of the imagination, please realize the blending of all this music (!) for yourself if you can, for it is impossible to describe it. However, they made the most of their opportunity and what they lacked in variety of instrument, they made up in the vigorous use of those they had. And away they marched to the fair ground, where a few of them listened to the speeches. The Rev. Mr. Wilson gave them a vigorous ten minute address. The Orange Bill had to be referred to, and then—keep out of politics if you can. He advised them to be true to the principles of the order, and while they guarded against foes from without, to be careful that there was no Judas in the camp, and if they could have no Orange Incorporation Bill, while certain political tricksters were in power at Ottawa, the sooner they were disposed of the better. There were cries of "No Politics!" but still he received a hearty applause when he sat down. Rev. Mr. Rogers avoided politics. An M. P., or M. P. P., from one of the constituencies of Grey, rather differed from Mr. Wilson. He said if Sir John hindered their Bill from becoming law, they should turn him out, but if they did they were to be very careful or they would get a worse one. This seemed to please the crowd as well as anything that was said. Then with three cheers for King William, the Queen and some less important individuals, the celebration was over.
Most of the lodges marched direct to the station, and away home. By evening only a few were left in town. There was not much drunkenness, probably there would have been more had they not gone home so early. There were some though, who did indulge more or less. It was the twelfth, how could they help it!

CRICKET MATCH.
Richmond Hill vs. Maple.
A splendid day was granted to the Cricket Clubs of Maple and Richmond Hill for measuring their strength. It was breezy and there were just sufficient white woolly clouds in the sky to temper the rays of the sun. In Bengough's romantic grove the wickets were pitched. On one side was a booth from which was dispensed soda-water to the thirsty; on the other side was a tree overhanging a cruelly hard and jagged stone on which sat, while they marked and grumbled, the scrutineers. The sterner sex was well represented; nor was altogether absent the gentler, whose gay attire, charming manners, silvery prattle and airy movements, served to relieve the display of shuffling, smoking, awkward squads of stalwart Canadian males who delight to assemble on such occasions. The neuter gender was made conspicuous by boys ad nauseam. Business was at once begun by Maple taking the bat. The umpires having assumed postures which had no slight pretensions to grace, a voice bawled out, Play!, and the ball was sent spinning along the crease. Throughout the whole game, it was evident that the batting was much inferior to the bowling; the latter was really excellent, while the former was only fair. The fielding on both sides was poor. In two innings, Maple ran up a score of 79, and Richmond Hill 67.
Great good nature and forbearance were shown by both Clubs. Of course, there were disputes and loud words, but nothing happened to mar the pleasure of the day. For those who had eyes to see and ears to hear, there was no lack of amusement. At the very start, one of the R. H. club, who looked, with a helmet on his head, very much like Prince Bismarck with his legs amputated at the knees, insisted on playing with an umbrella in one hand, and a bottle of sedative mixture in the other. This same party, on going to bat, had to have a man to run for him. The umbrella was soon abstracted, and the running mate was retired amidst a storm of hoots and yells, because, in running for a short bye, the man opposite the Umbrella fellow went at such a terrific pace that he did not notice the mate pass. On reaching the ground at which he had arrived in such haste, he was astonished to find him of the helmet. He instantly started back and of course, was put out faster than shot.

Then there was the man who was put out unfairly. He was loud in his complaints. He was honest, but the world was in conspiracy against his honesty. He had been cheated, and cheating was so repugnant to his noble or rather humble feelings that he positively refused to play the 2nd innings. But the recollection of a small bet he had caused him to change his mind. He played again, and again a malignant umpire (he of Richmond Hill) spoke him out. The strong man's agony was awful. He did not care for himself, but he abominated the very semblance of unfairness, of which, in a long and tolerably eventful career, he could honestly say that he had never been guilty.

Once the match was brought to a standstill, and all conversation within a radius of five miles was suspended, by a mighty inarticulate voice which could easily be mistaken for a fog-horn. When silence again reigned, Capt. N., in accents that smacked strongly of the heather, informed the R.H. scrutineer that the thunderous bass proceeded from Capt. R., who objected to him, the scrutineer, talking to a friend. Capt. N. further ordered said scrutineer to dump himself into the shed (meaning the booth). To this the scrutineer demurred, and with most audacious impudence, asserted that he only talked to keep himself from falling asleep, as the runs made were so few and far between that even the horrible stings he suffered from sitting on a beastly stone were insufficient, unaided by cheerful converse, to keep him awake. Capt. N. glared savagely, but forbore the penalty of the shed.
Then the Maple scrutineer delivered himself as follows: "I am sick of all this." "Of what?" asked his brother of the pencil; "Why," said the irate youth, "of being abused about this scoring. Every cork-headed, addle-pated, knock-kneed, duck-egg making duffer that can get within range of me howls and finds fault because his score is not as big as he thinks it ought to be. Why don't they do something besides getting out, if they want me to give them runs?" "Why, indeed," said his companion in misery, who still smarted from the threat of the shed.
The R. H. umpire was aggravatingly cool and airy. He judged a man out with a face beaming with smiles. On one occasion, when his decision was waited for with breathless silence, he exasperated the whole field, by frankly declaring that he knew nothing of the matter. He told the truth, but that did not satisfy the disgusted cricketers.
The M. umpire was stupendously solemn and dignified, but solemnity and dignity both gave place to astonishing agility when a violently driven ball knocked the bat out of his hand.
One of the M. C. spent fifteen minutes in explaining to the R. H. scrutineer, why he would only make two duck-eggs instead of 200. He said he was all gone, whatever that meant. Well, in the first innings, he did make his 0, but in the second innings, in a wild, frantic swipe to keep the ball from hitting his legs, he accidentally knocked it over the fence, scoring 3 amidst tremendous applause.

To all this add a really good supper given at the 'Maple Leaf' by the Maple Club to their visitors, and who can wonder that everybody pronounced the day to be a very pleasant one. Appended is the score:—

LACROSSE. WESTERN CHAMPIONSHIP.

"Excelsiors" vs. "Young Canadians".

VICTORY FOR RICHMOND HILL.
Seldom has a village of one thousand inhabitants the honor of gaining a greater victory from a town three or four times its size than that achieved yesterday by the Young Canadian Lacrosse players from Richmond Hill. They defeated the "Excelsiors" of Brampton, on their own grounds, winning the first, third, and fifth games, and thus gaining the Gold Medal and Western Championship. Those who witnessed the match pronounce it to have been one of the most hotly contested, and interesting games ever participated in. Many followed the club from Richmond Hill to see the match, and to cheer on and encourage the boys, in whom they had every confidence of winning the day, and in whom they were not disappointed.

We cannot here speak of individual play, but are correct in saying that every player did honor to himself and to the club to which he belongs.
Of the games won by the "Young Canadians" the ball was put through the flags in the 1st and 2nd by C. Savage, and in the 3rd by S. Searle.

No sooner had the welcome news reached home by telegram, than their many admirers went to work, prepared torches, got the Band in readiness, the ladies prepared a comfortable meal in the Temperance Hall, the village was beautifully illuminated from one end to the other, and by the time of the arrival—between 12 and 1 o'clock—the whole place was excitement.

After driving through the village, they repaired to the Hall where after the long drive, they enjoyed their late supper, amid many congratulations for their success. Short speeches, appropriate to the occasion, were delivered by the Reeve, Messrs. J. Elliott, P. Savage, M. Wilson and T. F. McMahon, after which the assemblage dispersed, giving three cheers for the Queen, the ladies, and the Young Canadians.

LOST.—A door-key. Will finder please leave it at LIBERAL Office.
GEO. DERRY.

Furred tongue and impure breath are two concomitants of biliousness remedied by Northrop and Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. Heartburn, which harasses the dyspeptic after meals, and all the perplexing and changeful symptoms of established indigestion, are dispersed by this salutary corrective tonic and celebrated blood purifier.
