ON A TOUR.

We touch Meaford and are at Owen Sound in the evening. Probably we are going to have company out, and a little gentle crowding for first place, we are nearly all hoping so, but we are not to enjoy the excitement of a race. One of the boats at the docks is the 'Alberta,' one of the C P. R, boats, which is undergoing repairs, having had its bow stove in by a collision on Lake Superior, the iron plates and ribs being broken fairly in two. By morning we are skirting the Great Manitoulin, and go close by Lonely Island. The only inhabitant is the lighthouse keeper. Soon the whistle shrieks its thrice told warning and we are nearing Killamey. But where is it ? There is nothing but rocks ahead, and we look in vain for any dock, till the boat gracefully turns, we enter a narrow channel, between the main-land and an island, and Lo! Killarney. Don't mistake, though, gentle reader. Do not picture to yourself gentle sloping, gresn hills, shading down into the blue of the lake. It could only have been called Killarney because it is not like the celebrated spot in the "green isle". "Rocks and sands, and barren lands" is all that is visible. Great hills of nearly bare granite rock, the only vegetation being small fir trees, loom up, one above the other, as far as the eye can reach. All the inhabitants are engaged in fishing, and it is surprising what an amount of fish is exported from here, every boat taking away tons, Fishing-smacks abound in the bay, and are seen miles from the shore, small flags and buoys mark the position of nets far out in the bay, telling of hundrds of gillstrung fish in the depths below. But it is too 'fishy' they are 'visible' to the nostrils everywhere; one gentleman claimed that even the wild roses growing on the rocks smelt of fish. Surely there was nothing here to attract tourists to make more than an hour's stay, most people would think, but there was a distinguished party of notables from Detroit and Michigan generally, who had come by pleasure yacht from Bay City, stopping here. One of the party was a delegate to the Democratic Convention lately at Chicago, and is cooling off after the excitement of those terrible (convention) weeks. A "noble" Lord rusticated here a few days also. He was attended by his own servants, but could not get accommodated to his taste, not even on the boat. The boat officers would not fall down and worship snobbery, and he vexed his little soul over the irreverence of this cold world. He was going to report the "bloody bowt" when he returned to Collingwood; he dld not know what to make of this "bloomin blawsted" country anyway. At the next port, Manitowaning, your correspondent left the boat to pursue the voyage to Mackinaw later. This village is on the north shore of the Manitoulin Id. at the head of a deep bay. "A pretty little place" was the general verdict of the excursionists from the boat, an opinion which was verified by a closer inspection, when the boat stopped. It certainly is very beautiful for situation, high and clean, and just at its foot foot one of the most beauiful bays on the continent. It is also quite promising, and the most important village between Wiarton and the ! Soo ', boasting all the accessories of any village, with a lawyer to boot. The Indian and land agent, J. C. Phipps, also resides here. He is just the man for the position, the true friend of poor Lo the Indi an, honest, straightforward, never making his position a means for plunder; in all the difficulties between the whites and Indians with which he has had anything to do he has managed affairs, so that neither party could complain of his in-

The poor Indian has been the gullible party usually on which the dishonest trader has practised his sharpness, and come out ahead every time; now however, he is learning by dear experience to know the relative value of things. Not that all the merchants here, or those who have been here, are dishonest, but human nature is weak, and when it is so easy to take advantage, most of them do it. The only way by which they could not be led into temptation was to abandon the business and that was not convenient. So the few products the red man had, fish, or berries, or handiwork, were traded off, always trade-and he bled every time. By a reference to any map it can early be seen that the east end of the Island is nearly cut off by two bays that extend into the Id. from the north and south. This east end is all Indian Reserve, about two thousand of them oc- tempt on a short hit, the ball was thrown liberal policy of the Government, we will flying and the umpire called out? PERSONALS.

Jos. Orr, M. D., is now practising medicine in Sheffield, England.

Mrs. John E. West, of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., is visiting with Mrs. I. Crosby and other friends.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Isaac Murray, near Teston, has been dangerously ill for some time.

Mr. J. W. Franks, school teacher at Pine Grove, spent a few days in the village during the week.

Messrs. T. Noble, of Maple and C. Lawrence, of Langstaff, are spending their vacation in the Maritime Provinces.

Mr. E. F. Langstaff has been engaged as second assistant in the High School in place of Mrs. Kirkman, resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan and family started, on Tuesday, on a tour to Newfoundland and other places along the sea-side.

Mr. T. G. Wilson, representing the Canada Law Journal, The Week and Rural Canadian, was in the village on Friday taking subscriptions. The Rev. Hugh Rose, M. A., late of Manchester, England, will preach in the Presbyterian Church here next Sabbath, morning and evening. Mr. F. B. Denton, of Cobourg Collegiate Institute, was in the village on Tuesday and called at THE LIBERAL office. He is spending part of his holidays with his sister, Mrs. Geo. Cook, near Maple.

Mrs. Kirkman, second assistant in the High School, has resigned her position and accepted a more remunerative one. She will be greatly missed, not only in the school, but in the Presbyterian Church, where she has been an earnest worker.

Jacob Lockman, Buffalo, N. Y., says he has been using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for rheumatism; he had such a lame back he could not do anything, but one bottle has, to use his own expression, "cured him up." He thinks it is the best thing in the market.

CRICKET MATCH.

Bachelors vs. Benedicts.

As times have been somewhat dull in business circles in Richmond Hill for the last few weeks, owing, no doubt, to the fact that the farming community are busily engaged with the harvest, and, as many of our village sports have long been telling of great scoring, heavy striking and straight bowling on the cricket field in days gone by, it was decided on Saturday morning last to have a match for a supper and the championship in the afternoon, between the single and married men of the town, and forever set at rest the doubts existing in the minds of some of our skeptics as to whether those long hits spoken of, were real or only imaginary. Accordingly J. H. Sanderson and T. F. McMahon were chosen captains to select players for the married and single men respectively, and by two o'clock p. m., the hour for commencing the match, each captain had on the ground the strongest team which could possibly be brought together from within the limits of the corporation. Mr. T. H. Redditt kindly consented to act as scorer for either side, and Messrs. J. Duncan and T. Riley were appointed umpires. It is unnecessary to say each of these discharged the duty of his office conscientiously and with good satisfaction to the players; yet, although every man had the utmost confidence in the integrity of the umpires, and was ready to brand any one who would dare to question their decision, it was amusing to notice that when one became personally interested, he would think that possibly the umpires were not altogether infallible, and that the cricketer's opinion should not be ignored.

The copper being thrown up, the young but was unfortunately run out before he | club. got rightly at work. Soules next went in making two, and was followed by Maite. Wilson who had the honor of presenting to the scorer the first duck-egg. J. Lealiss now came forward with strong step, steady nerve and a look of determination in his eye and grasped the sition in Seaforth. handle of the bat, apparently bent on running up a goodly number for the boys. It soon became apparent that his forte was not in running, as, on making an atthe wickets been pitched eleven yards in place of twenty-two, Jim would have got ready out, with seven runs, and Dewsbury still continued to send in the balls from the shoulder, but was beginning to the music. This player had added twen- at the call of the chair.

ty-three to the list when he was declared out for having leg before wicket. Nicholls added one more and was caught out. Arthur Pugsley immortalized his name by making forty before his stumps fell, and was loudly cheered at the conclusion of his innings. Atkinson. Searle and McKenzie scored 6, 7 & 7 respectively, thus making the whole for the first innings including byes, no less than 107.

After a few minutes rest the older heads went to the willow with some nervousness, yet confident of putting their opponents in for the supper. Dewsbury showed some fine play, and retired after making the handsome score of fifteen. Sanderson added five more, and gave place to Sneath of the "Cheap Cash House," who made three, and might have made as many more had he struck the ball instead of his wickets, when giving a terrible swipe. The Dr. showed good style, but knocked the ball into Nicholls' hands, who held it like a vice, adding another duck-egg. P. G. Savage was not bowled out during the afternoon, but had a faculty of knocking the ball into his opponent's hands. His score for both innings placed side by side made 11. Ralph Archer, evidently an old stager at the business, made a score of thirteen in the first innings and carried the bat through. Wiley made four ones, and "dug" for his life in endeavoring to make another, but his wickets were knocked down before he reached the scratch. About this time Searle distinguished himself by shying a ball at the wickets and striking the umpire (who was standing about 10 feet away) between the shoulders amid tremendous shouts from the young urchins who were sitting around. Mason, Pugsley, Devlin and Mapes were soon disposed of and the first innings was ended, score 43.

It was then decided that the married men should follow their innings, which they did, and made exactly the same number as in the first case, losing the match by one innings and eleven runs. Space will not allow us to speak of individual play in the second innings, but would say that Archer and Sanderson showed much care and judgment. The best of feeling prevailed throughout the game, and the interest never lulled, a lively dispute occuring at intervals serving to break the monotony. We understand the defeated players intend playing a return match at an early date when we expect to see a stronger team on the field. Below is the score:-
