The Evils of Intemperance.

In thinking over the title of this Essay, I am at a loss to know how to limit myself to six pages of foolscap in dealing with it, even in my simple way. "The Evils of Intemperance" is a subject which if ably recorded, would fill a page the length of which would cover this fair Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific. We will first look at this great evil as affecting the man who drinks ; the poor drunkard nimself. We meet a poor, miserable wreck of humanity, with shaking limbs, which ofttimes refuse to perform their office, and leave their owner lying out the street, or in the ditch, with blood shot eyes, from which gleams no ray of that intellect with which a kind Creator furnished him. Constitution ruined, character gone, family disgraced, nothing before him in this life but poverty, misery and distress. And what are his prospects for another life I that which never ends. When we read in God's Word that stern decree, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of Heaven", we find in that fiat a sad answer to the question. Poor, lost brother, for we cannot hide the fact that he is still our brother. May a loving Saviour call so loudly at the stronglybarred door of your heart, that through its hardened recesses the invitation may be heard, "Come unto me all ye that la bor and are heavy laden, and I will give

Then think of the drunkard's family. Think of the wife whom he took from her parents' home, and vowed to love and cherish till death; think of her in many cases toiling at the hardest kinds of labor for a scanty pittance, wherewith to furmish food for her helpless family, while he, who should, by the laws of nature, be the "bread-winner," is ever on the watch to snatch what he can, (either by force or stratagem) in order that his craving may be satisfied. Oh, think of the drunkard's wife, of the ill words, curses and blows, which are her portion, and which must tall with deadlier force when she thinks of the different life she hoped for when she placed her hand in his, and promised to be faithful till death. Poor help you to bear your grievous burden temperance" can never blight, and where you need not hang your head in shame as the drunkard's wife.

Let us now think of the drunkard's children, poor children, whose home is the drankard's home. Compare the home of happy children, that Heaven of child. hood, where the loving smiles and tender sympathies of a gentle mother soothe all their little troubles, and the firm counsel and helpful hand of a proud father is ever held out to them to prepare them for filling places of honor and usefulness in their path of life; Compare this home, I repeat, with the so-called home of the drunkard's children. See them, ill-clad, ill-fed, uncared for mites of humanity, shunned and scorned by other children, hearing the loud whisper, "Their father was drunk again last night and beat their mother," See them when they can no longer bear the tannts and jeers on the streets, slink off to this "burlesque" on the "sweetest word in our language." See them creep softly in for fear that father is drunk again, and steal to their comfortless pallet, supperless, alas, glad to thus escape the blows and kicks of a drunken father. Poor little ones, for whom Jesus died; happy for you when in childhood you are called home by the same loving voice which many years ago spoke in tender accents the words, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, J. McConnell, for tramp, board & and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

We are glad that England is aroused on this question. We rejoice that the United States is lifting up her voice and crying shame on the accursed traffic. It brings still greater joy to our heart to log. know that our own Canada is stirred from ocean to ocean, and that this beloved Ontario, "Our own, our native land, " is sending county after county to swell the triumphant army of noble men who work for the restoration of the fallen, and that the "infidel" question of Cain is being answered by the voice of thousands of Christians to-day. "I am my brother's keeper." And we cannot shirk this responsibility, or escape the consequences of refusing to honor and obey the Divine command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'

THE WEEK:

A Canadian Journal of Politics, Society and Literature.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY, AT $3 PER YEAR.

THE WEEK, "Canada's Literary Journal," which has just entered upon its second year, appeals by its comprehensive table of contents to the different tastes which exist within the circle of a cultured home, and will endeavor faithfully to reflect and summarize the intellectual, social and political movements of the day. Fiction, in the form of seriel and short stories, also occupies a prominent place.

The union which it presents of the Magazine with the Weekiy Journal appears to be recognized as the thing needed, and Independent Journalism is evidently growing in favor with the most enlightened and patriotic of the community. The literary talent of Canada, having an organ offered to it, is being drawn forth, and our staff of Contributors is constantly increasing. We are thus enabled to improve from time to time special departments, such as those of Commerce, Education, Art. Science Music and Chess. The lovers of music have, we trust, of late been sensible of our desire to promote the interests of that great source of happiness and refinement. In politics, THE WEEK is thoroughly In tependent. It is untrammelled by party connections, free from party leanings, unbiassed by ed bp Fireman Tyndall, that a special party considerations. In Canadian politics its desire will be to further, to the utmost of its meeting be held on Friday, Jan. 9th, to power, the free and healthy development of the
