THE SKYE CROFTERS.

A Correspondent Tells How They Live, I will describe a typical Idrigil house, which is occupied by the aged daughter and three grown-up grandchildren of a fisherman named John Macdonald, who has been dead for many years. The croft upon which it stands slopes outward toward the bay of Uig, and is one of some 350 that belong to Major Frazer, of Kilmuir. It is about two and a half acres in extent, and pays a nominal rental of wather more than £5; a temporary reduction of 25 per cent. of that sum having, however, been conceded during the last two or three years by the proprietor. Near the centre of the croft is a sea of sticky mud; and amid the slough are two very small stacks of corn, each about nine feet high by six in diameter, carefully thatched, and covered with old nets to prevent their being scattered to the winds. Close at hand is the house—a building of rough unmortared stone, measuring, perhaps, ten feet by twenty, and very thickly roofed; first with "divits" of turf, then with a close thatch of heather, and finally with fragments of coarse netting weighted with lumps of gray trap. The door is broken, and will not shut properly; there is no chimney; and the sole window, consisting of a single pane of glass, has an area of not more than three square feet. From the doorway, and from a small hole in the low roof, volumes of peat smoke | But stop; ten tons is about the maximum escape; and when I entered the hut, I could not, for several minutes distinguish anything within, owing to the dense fumes that rose from a scanty fire smouldering on the floor in the middle of the gloomy room. At last my eyes became accustomed | draw this amount of gold from 'he subto the semi-darkness, and I was able to treasury? Of the African or Indian varimake out the forms of the inmates of the hovel. They sat huddled on a low black settle, warming themselves, and greedily watching a battered pot that, suspended from an improvised tripod above the fire, contained a quantity of thin broth; the main ingradients of which were, as I afterwards discovered, potatoes and fish. shared the poor people's meal of broth a mile in 2:10, twelve hours and forty and oaten cake, while the smoke curled upwards and hung beneath the roof in an impenetrable cloud; the whole making, with the festooned fishing-nets and the tattered oilskins on the walls, an interior | red feet, eh? Well, friend, you would which Tenier would have delighted to paint, if there had been any jollity in the seen," for a 300 foot bar-left by 250 feet. scene. There was no table, but at one To shoulder this tremendous bar of gold end of the room there was a shaky dresser, on which was arranged a poor display of cracked crockery and rusty tins. The inside of the house was divided, by means of rotten partitions about six feet in height, into three small chambers; one being the living-room, a second a bed- done. room, and the third a lumber or store room. In the bedroom the clothes were simply old rags and sacking, barely sufficient to cover poor humanity; and the floor throughout was formed, so far as I could see, of the hard earth. Yet this house of Macdonalds was a palace in comparison with some of the huts I visited crouching. One might reasonably expect to find that the people who live in such wretchedness are stunted and ill-looking. But they are not. They are a thick-set intelligent race; and some of the girls are models of buxomness, although before middle age all the women become withered. They are long-lived too. Their faults are that they are idle and saturated with superstition and prejudice. In only one out of at least a score of crofters' houses which I entered did I see any sign that the inmates regularly devoted themselves to any remunerative home employment. In that one two women were weaving home-spun tweed, and capital cloth they made on their awkward loom. I am glad to be able to say that most of the Skye landlords wear this tweed when they can get it; but if there was a wider demand there would be a larger supply, and the islanders would be proportionately benefitted. Until quite recently there were weavers in almost every township, and the art might easily be revived. The crofters can now get cheaper material for themselves from Manchester, and it is almost exclusively the richer classes who use the tweed of the island.—|St. James' Gazette.

An Infernal Machine. A box containing an infernal machine was brought by a boy to the American Tract Society's office, 150 Nassau street, New York recently. It is believed the intention of the sender was to kill Anthony Comstock, special agent of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. The boy said a man, whose description he gave, had paid him 10c. at the corner of Leroy and Hudson streets to deliver the package. The machine consisted of a spring, parts of matches, broken glass 4 oz. bottle of powder and a phial of nitric acid. The package was addressed, "Bookstore, 150 Nassau street." Comstock said he did not think it was designed to to harm the American Tract Sotook charge of it. The box had formerly contained collars, but had been altered into approved pattern. Comstock removed the cover from the box, creating a stampede in the store, and then took the box policemen were detailed to accompany the boy to the place where he said the package had been given to him, Vanderbilt's Gold.

Vanderbilt is worth $200,000,000, of which $50,000,000 are in United States bonds and can be turned into gold at any time, and the rest is made up of stocks and bonds, the bulk of which are above par. Vanderbilt's wealth, therefore represents so much gold. The ordinary mind can get no sort of notion of such a stupendous pyramid of gold as $200,000, 000. Put it into a pyramid of Egypt, whot a monument it would make in the desert for its owner! Var derbilt's capital of gold is greater than all there was in the world-conquering Rome in the glittering reign of Augustus Cæsar. It is greater than the whole amount of gold and silver there was in the civilized world in 1492, at the time of the discovery of America. It is more than the entire product for the past hundred years of the great gold mines of the Czar of Russia. It is more than the whole product for two years of all the gold mines of the world. It is nearly twice as much as all the precious metals produced thus far in in the gold and silver-bearing State of Colorado. Counting this vast fortune dollar by dollar at the rate of sixty per minute, it would take six years to accomplish the act. Placed one after another it would make a string of dollars from New York to St.

The weight of all this gold is 350 tons. How many freight cars would be required to carry it? Ten, you'll say at a jump weight that is carried by a freight car, cousequently, at that allowance, we should have a train of thirty-five freight cars. And what a train for the robbers to loot at! How many Jumbos would it take to ety seventy could walk off with it, giving five tons to each. And what a show they would make-seventy Jumber

Turn the gold into ten-dollar coins, lay them in a circle with their edges touching, and what would be the circumference of that circle? It would be so great that i would take Maud S., going at the rate of minutes to get around it.

Two hundred millions of gold, run into a square bar a foot thick, said bar would be how long, do you think? A CANADA BEAR FIGHT.

An Exciting Adventure of Two New Workers in the Wilds of the Dominion.

Enfield Stout of Tioga county returned to Elmira, N. Y., recently from a two weeks hunt in Frontenac county, Canada. He relates a thrilling adventure Thomas DeWitt and George Pearson, two young men from one of Hudson River counties, had with a wounded bear in the Canadian wilds while he was hunting with them. They had been hunting at White Lake, in Frontenac county, and toward evening rowed from one side of the lake to the other on their way to camp. As they were about to step from the boat they heard a loud crash in the thicket a few yards away. On looking around the young men saw a well-grown she bear with two cubs come from behind a fallen tree. Pearson instantly fired, and the old bear fell to the ground. The hunter ran to the spot, expecting to find her shot through the head, and was confronted by her standing on her hind legs and savagely approaching him. The fierceness of her appearance was increased by her lower jaw having been carried away Frauds, cheap, poisonous and dangerous by the rifle ball.

The bear threw herself upon Pearson before he could defend himself, and hunter and bear fell together on the ground. Pearson's cries brought DeWitt to the scene, but he did not dare to fire for fear of hitting his companion, so closely was he held by the bear as they struggled on the ground. The bear could not do Pearson at y injury with her mouth, and he seized her long hair in his teeth and buried his face in her fur, thus keeping it away from her sharp claws. Seeing that he could not be of service te his friend with his gun, DeWitt picked up a heavy club and beat the bear across the back and head. The second blow stunned her, and Pearson sprang to his feet; but the bear quickly recovered herself and sprang upon the hunter, receiving his hunting knife in her breast. The furious animal struck Pearson a blow with one of her paws on the shoulder, and hurled him several feet away. He fell against a stump, breaking two of his ribs.

The bear then rushed upon DeWitt, who is a giant in size and strength. He dodged to one side and seized the bear around the body, and threw her over his reach him. He inclined to the belief | left shoulder, and then shouted to Pearthat it was of infidel origin designed son to place his gun against her head and blow her brains out. Pearson sent a bullet through her head, and De Witt held her, a modern infernal machine of the most bleeding and struggling, on his shoulder and when one day he excitedly declared until she died. Pearson was injured the that he had devised "a self-adjusting worst of the two men, and reached camp helix,', his uninformed wife hastily conwith difficulty. The two young bears es- sulted with a physician about putting htm and boy to the police station. Two caped to the woods while the struggle between the old one and the hunters was going on. The dead bear weighed nearly 200 pounds.

Despise Not the Day of Small Things.

Little things may help a man to risea bent pin in an easy chair for instance. Dr. Pierce's 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets' are small things, pleasant to take, and they cure sick-headaches, relieve torpid livers and do wonders. Being purely vegetable they cannot harm any one. All druggists.

Intelligent non-professional people who do not belong to the English-speak ing races have queer notions about the celebrities of England and America. Daniel Webster is still known to many folks as the author of a dictionary, and now the London Athenaum tells of a brilliant Spaniard who has confused ideas about Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood. He sto d before the facade of London University, and after gazing at it long and thoughtfully pointed out the statue of Harvey to a friend who acted as his guide. "Just like you practical English," he said, "to erect a statue to a man because he invented a sauce."

There Shall be no Alps.

When Napoleon talked of invading Italy one of his officers said : "But, sire, remember the Alps," To an ordinary man these would have seemed simply insurmountable, but Napoleon responded eagerly: "There shall be no Alps." So the famous Simplon pass was made. Disease, like a mountain, stands in the way of fame, fortune and honor to many who by Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" might be healed and so the mountain would disappear. It is specific for all blood, ohronic, lung and liver disexes, such as consumption (which is scrofula of the lungs), pimples, blotches, eruptions, tumors, swellings, fever-sores and kindred complaints.

How quickly is it possible for a man's legs, in health, to increase their bulk by half? A pair of trousers were made by a Chicago tailor so tardily that six weeks elapsed between the measurement and the delivery. They proved too tight. The maker sued for pay, and testified that the dimensions were in accordance with the size of the legs at the time he took the figures; while the defendant will introduce expert testimony to prove that he did not fatten so rapidly as such a conclusion would imply.

At Havana, when a distinguished stranger visits the tobacco factory of Senor Cabana or Partagas, the custom is to offer him an "obsequio" by fashioning a new brand of cigars in his honor. To this we owe the excellent cigars known as the Serrano and the Henry Clay. The London tobacco manufacturers elected to pay Charles Dickens the Cuban compliment. A neat little cigar, costing only two cents, was devised, and was christened "The Pickwick," which still retains its popularity in England.

Catarrb-A New Treatment. Perhaps the most extrarordinary success that has been achieved in modern science has been attained by the Dixon Treatment of catarrh Out of 2,000 patients 'reated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubbern malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. or the patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at ail. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tisaces, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination; this accomplished the catarrh is practically cured, and one permanenc, is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple and can be dove at home, and the present season of the year is the most tavorable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 30c King-street West, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on catarrh.-Montreal
