LOCALS
The Illustrated War News.
The Grip Printing and Publishing Co. of Toronto, have issued a paper with the above title, which contains twelve large pages and filled with illustrations of incidents and events connected with the North-West Rebellion. A very fine double page picture graphically describes the departure of the contingents from the Queen's Own and Tenth Royal Regiments, and the men of the Infantry School, from the Union Station, on which occasion probably the largest crowd of people that ever assembled in Canadian territory was gathered together. This picture is well worth framing as a memento of Riel's second rebellion. Besides this the paper contains a graphic sketch of the battle at Duck Lake, and also numerous other striking illustrations in connection with the rebellion, including portraits of the principal Indian Chiefs and the Town of Battleford, showing the besieged garrison. The engravings are finely lithographed. We are sure the efforts of the publishers will be appreciated by all Canadians, and that the paper will have a very large sale. It is placed at the low price of 15 cents, and can be procured either from the office of publication in Toronto or from local stationers.

Lacrosse Concert.
According to expectation, the Concert given by the "Young Canadian" Lacrosse Club in the Masonic Hall, on the evening of Good Friday, was a complete success. The day was stormy, and the roads were ever so unfavorable, notwithstanding which the Hall was packed with an appreciative audience, who seemed to thoroughly enjoy the lengthy programme. The chair was taken by Mr. A. G. F. Lawrence, whose smiling countenance on the platform was a guarantee that the best of order was maintained. The Band played several lively selections outside the Hall as the crowd was collecting, which had a cheering effect. The "First twelve" of the Lacrosse Club opened the Concert with a song and chorus, composed for the occasion, entitled "The New Park Ground," which was loudly encored. Mr. J. Brown, of Toronto, gave a song, "Sailing," and the audience showed their appreciation by well merited applause. This gentleman has a baritone voice of great magnitude, and this popular piece lost nothing of its beauty by his rendering. Mr. Bailey and daughter then gave an Instrumental on the Violin & Piano, and were followed by Mr. S. Agar with a comic reading. The Eglington Quartette Club, composed of Mr. A. L. Willson, Mr. C. Willson, Miss Anderson and Miss Kirk, sang a beautiful selection from "The Haymakers," which was listened to with marked attention by every one present, and the applause which followed the performers at the finish, was exceedingly complimentary. This was followed by a serio-comic by Mr. J. W. Crossley, of Springhill, "Swinging on the Golden Gates." This song fairly brought down the house, and Mr. Crossley was brought back to give an encore, "mid thunders of applause. The next on the program was a reading by Miss Bertha Wilson, a young lady well and popularly known in this vicinity, and it is only necessary to say that her reading on this occasion was equal to any of her previous performances. Then followed a selection from the Richmond Hill Glee Club, which was well received. Miss Ada Reid of Thornhill sang a solo in such a pleasing manner as to gratify the most fastidious. Mr. A. J. Collins, on the violin, accompanied by his sister, delighted the audience with several selections. It is almost impossible to be too flattering when speaking of these musical performances. They were encored, and kindly responded. The next was a solo by Mr. A. L. Willson, playing his own accompaniment, who was warmly greeted as in former years, when he appeared on a Richmond Hill platform. Mr. Willson, responding to an encore, closed the first part of the programme. As the time was passing away, only a few minutes were allowed for intermission. Space will not permit a notice of the second part, suffice it to say it was fully as interesting as the first, the performers being the same with two or three additions. The Misses Reid favored the audience with a duet, and Mr. C. Savage, of Patterson gave a cornet solo which was above criticism. The accompanists were Misses Arksey, Hewison, Wiley, Reid and Mr. Lloyd. The Lacrosse boys should feel proud of their success and highly honored by the talent which came to their assistance, and which shows the high appreciation in which the Club is held by the surrounding public. The Concert closed by all singing the National Anthem. The net proceeds will amount to over $40.

PERSONALS.
The Misses Spragge, of Owen Sound, are at present visiting their sister, Mrs. John Boyle.
Our enterprising neighbor, Mr. Henry Miller, has purchased the residence of Mrs. Campbell, who purposes removing to Collingwood.
Miss Sanderson and Miss Wiley have been appointed a Press Committee by the W. C. T. Union, who in future will furnish interesting items on Temperance from week to week.
Among others who have gone to the North-West, we notice the name of Thos. E. Elliott of University Company K, Queen's Own, only son of Mr. Geo. Elliott, Councillor for the township of Vaughan.
Mr. T. H. Redditt started for Montreal today, as a delegate to represent the "Young Canadian" Lacrosse Club at the National Amateur Association to be held in that city on Friday April 10th.

The New Park Ground.
By request we publish the following verses sung by the "Young Canadian" Lacrosse Club, at their concert on Friday evening last:—
(Tune of "Climbing up the Golden Stairs.")
Come all you friends and neighbors,
Now lay aside your labors,
Come with us to the New Park Ground,
Come see us play a game,
Which will sustain our fame
Playing on the New Park Ground.
Although we are not greedy,
Our funds just now are needy,
Playing on the New Park Ground,
By paying fifteen cents,
You've no need to climb the fence
Playing on the New Park Ground.

CHORUS.
O hear the boys singing,
There's music in the sound,
O see their sticks swinging,
Playing on the New Park Ground.
O many a game we've taken,
And many a foe we've shaken,
Playing on the New Park Ground,
They said it was so small,
That they had no chance at all.
Playing on the Old Fair Ground,
But away with that excuse,
They'll find it of no use,
Playing on the New Park Ground,
For we have a larger field,
And we never mean to yield,
Playing on the New Park Ground.
We're Champions of the West,
And we mean to do our best,
Playing on the New Park Ground,
And that Championship we'll hold,
For our boys are true and bold,
Playing on the New Park Ground,
Although we're young and slight,
We'll hold the Medal bright,
Playing on the New Park Ground.
The "Young Canadians" we
Are a goodly sight to see
Playing on the New Park Ground.

Australia Letter.

Melbourne is a large and flourishing city of about 300,000 souls. The streets are wide and many of them shaded with trees, which, however, to my mind are not so pretty as the maple or chestnut. I do not know that I have ever seen shop windows more daintily dressed than in Melbourne, and even in outlying towns the taste of the Australians in that direction seems unique. In Sydney they have tram cars two storeys high propelled by steam through the principal streets, but in Melbourne there are neither tram cars nor street cars. One must do one's travelling through the city either in an old-fashioned omnibus, or in a cab of not very dignified appearance, or else—walk. After seeing the magnificent harbor at Sydney I imagined the one at Melbourne would be about as good, but as a matter of fact it is the worst I ever saw. The river by which the city is gaird has to be continually dragged in order to allow vessels of any size to pass up and down.

One of the first peculiarities noticed in the Australians is the curious pronunciation of certain words. The Yankees are noted for their peculiar twang, but I never heard anything to equal the Australians in that direction. All words with an 'ou' sound are pronounced as if there were an 'a' before that diphthong: about with them is about, cow is caow in pronunciation. The system of rail-roading here is much behind the American system although many of the hot Colonials cannot believe it possible that their mode could be improved. Each carriage or coach is divided up into ten or fifteen apartments, each of which is supposed to seat comfortably (1) ten or twelve persons. When the train starts the doors are locked. All required to make a complete prison are handcuffs and chains. The railways here are all government affairs, which perhaps accounts for such a miserable system.

After stopping in Melbourne a short time I took a train to Geelong, a pretty little town about fifty miles west, situated on a fine bay extending inland from the Southern Pacific. Although one of the oldest towns in Victoria, it is one of the slowest in growth and commerce. The contrast between the dull, monotonous, go-as-you-please style of the Geelongese, and the hurry, bustle and break-neck speed of the American cities was very great. The place recalled to my memory Washington Irving's description of Sleepy Hollow. Two-wheeled carts are almost universally used here for all purpose, and when a four-wheeled trap is seen instead of having a tongue or pole they use two pair of shafts. In either case a person needs to take sight to be sure that the waggon is moving at all. I wandered down to the wharves one fine day and found on one dock about twenty men fishing with hook and line. Some were lying near the edge of the wharf occasionally casting a wearisome glance towards the motionless cork, others sat on the edge with their feet dangling towards the water, apparently half asleep and in danger of dropping into a peaceful nap, and thence into the sea. I stopped there about twenty minutes, and during that time one brave fisherman succeeded in pulling in a solitary member of the finny tribe; but laziness seemed contagious, and the poor fish seemed to think it too much trouble to even wriggle. Geelong manufactures some very good woollen goods, for which it has quite a reputation. But like too many factories in Canada, they are closed a good part of the time. I must confess they can boast of better sidewalks than Canadians generally see. Board walks are never thought of here, almost always asphalt, sometimes, however stone slabs.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

J. H. Earl, West Shetford, P. Q., writes: "I have been troubled with liver complaint for several years, and have tried different medicines with little or no benefit, until I tried Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, which gave me immediate relief, and I would say that I have used it since with the best effect. No one should be without it. I have tried it on my horse in cases of cuts, wounds, &c., and I think it equally as good for horse as for man."
