LACROSSE MATCH.

The match to be played on Saturday next between the "Torontos" and the "Young Canadians" is very pleasing to us for two reasons. It will undoubtedly prove to be only the first of a series of games with a first-class club, and therein contains the beginning of a rapid improvement in style, skill and power. And again, it is the outcome of a feeling of good-will between the clubs, and, on that account, it is not at all derogatory to the dignity of our boys to say, it will tend to firmly cement an alliance with a club which in many respects deservedly ranks as the first in Canada, and for the matter of that, in the world.

The game will certainly be keenly and even desperately contested. It would be useless to speculate on the result. But it may at least be anticipated that in rapid checking, and powerful individual play, the advantage will be found on the side of the "Young Canadians," while in team play, precision of throwing and catching, the visitors will stand first.

We are glad that every preparation will be made to accommodate the vast crowd which will be present to witness the match. The grand stand is to be enlarged and improved. Programmes will be distributed. In fact, if the weather proves fine, Saturday, June 20th, bids fair to be the red-letter day of Lacrosse in Richmond Hill.

SCOTT ACT.

The opponents of the Scott Act have for some time been seeking to impress on the public mind the bigotry of its advocates. It is needless to point out that the you're another argument contains a sufficient answer to the charge. But the matter is worthy of a more serious consideration, and we shall proceed to enquire wherein lies the bigotry, complained of.

It may be well to premise that both the Scott Act and Anti-Scott ranks contain many whose zeal outranks not only their discretion, but even outrages common sense, and gives rise to grave suspicions that with them advocacy of a cause is due either to a love of interference with the business of others, or to that blindness of judgment which ascribes to motives of evil difference from their own opinions. We set aside these, not merely because they do not represent the true type, but because they are at most rank and soul excrescences. Yet we submit that to him of feeble purpose or of careless spirit, sincerity and pure ardor are often mistaken for savage intolerance. Great results have seldom been achieved without great enthusiasm. Nor does he dare to weigh nicely the effects on individuals of that which in his inmost soul he is convinced is for the good of all mankind. The divine founder of Christianity spoke with a calmness, which results from the inevitable, of some sad results which would be sure to flow not from his doctrines but from the attitude which many men would certainly assume to them. 'Not peace,' said he, 'but a sword.' Yet who would even dream of trying to found on this an argument against the New Faith. If then Scott Act men regard even with aversion those who traffic in all in alcohol, let this not be imputed to bigotry, but rather to strong convictions. After this plea, it would be puerile to refuse to many Anti-Scott Act men an equal honesty of purpose and depth of persuasion. The truth is that this mighty question of drink has two faces, and he who gazes only on one of them will come wide of the mark. On the one side, we see in all its hideous ugliness the terrible effects of liquor, and the tongue which would say a word in its favor cleaves to the mouth. On the other side, there is the complex nature of man, with all its greatness and all its debasements, all its strength and all its weakness, all its splendid capabilities and all its wretched cravings.

We can ignore neither of these two pictures. But from the whole dispute must be eliminated all financial considerations. Virtue and morality are not to be computed in dollars and cents. They refuse to be loved and practised profitably on any other grounds than love of themselves for their innate goodness and beauty. This fight must therefore go on, regardless of individual loss or gain, joy or pain, but mindful alone of the public weal.

There are cheap panaceas for various human ailments continually cropping up. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Care has no affinity with any of these. Unlike them, the article is derived from the purest sources, is prepared with the utmost chemical skill, and is a genuine remedy and not a palliative for biliousness, constipation, kidney troubles, impurity of the blood, and female complaints.

THORNHILL

From Our Own Correspondent.

MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT.—Last Monday evening a complimentary concert to Miss Collins was given in the Victoria Hall. Despite the heavy rain which occurred in the morning, causing the roads to be almost impassable, quite a large gathering assembled to listen to one of the best concerts ever rendered during your correspondent's stay, at least, in this village. On account of the unavoidable absence of Dr. R. B. Orr, Mr. T. H. Redditt, B. A., Richmond Hill was called to the chair, and in a short, pithy and remarkably pleasing address, opened the proceedings by calling on the Orchestra for the introductory piece.

I am sorry that space forbids a full account of the different pieces rendered during the evening. I shall therefore try and be as brief as possible in the comments I may see fit to make.

The second piece on the programme was a song by Mr. Redstone, the celebrated "Gipsy's Laughing Song," which was exquisitely rendered, and received tremendous applauding, as well as a hearty encore. In reply was given "Welcome home, our volunteers." After intermission, the same gentleman sang "The Sailor's Grave," when he was again encored, and in reply, favored the audience with "Nancy Lee." Mr. Redstone is a gentleman of very fine personal appearance possessing a full, clear, sweet, and melodious voice. His singing was chiefly speaking characteristically Operatic, and of this a very high type. The third piece was an instrumental Trio by Miss Collins' pupils: Misses Ettie Clay, Bertha Ramsden, and Master Fred Clay, and although very difficult to render, it was very ably gone through, exhibiting in a very high degree the able and efficient teaching done by Miss Collins. An instrumental Duett was also given by Misses Maggie Collins and Bertha Chapman; also one by Miss Abbie Thompson and Miss Collins. The three just mentioned are also pupils of Miss Collins, and to say the least, they performed their work to the entire satisfaction of all present, and reflected great credit on their teacher. A couple of songs were given by Mr. Friend which met with a fair share of appreciation. Miss Mitchell who played the accompaniments during the evening, gave a gallop, by special request of the audience, in the rendering of which, great skill and delicacy of touch were combined. The audience were perfectly delighted with her music throughout the entire evening. It would be unjust to overlook the two songs, one being a response to an encore, given by a Miss Scarlett, which almost brought down the house. The comic part of the entertainment was well sustained by Mr. J. Fax, of Toronto, whose wry faces and ludicrous gestures created much laughter. His acting in the first part of the programme was slightly overdrawn, but his selections after intermission were much enjoyed. In conclusion I would state that many other pieces were rendered as ably, and brought forth as great applause as those already referred to. Those to which I refer are as follows:—Duett on Cornet and Euphonium, by Anderson Bros; Violin Solo, Mr. E. Marley; Instrumental Duett, Misses Mitchell and Collins; Euphonium Solo, Mr. G. Anderson.

At a late hour the concert was brought to a close by the full Orchestra rendering "Home Sweet Home," followed by the National Anthem. We expect it will be some time before the people of Thornhill will again be favored with such a treat. It is impossible in such a short letter to do justice to those who took part in the proceedings, but it is worthy of remark, that the talent, which was principally from Toronto, was of a very high type.

M. A. St. Mars, St. Boniface, Man., writes: Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is a public benefit. It has done wonders here, and has cured myself of a bad cold in one day. Can be relied upon to remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.
