Howland and Goodenham's course of action, and instructing them to prosecute any party or parties who helped to wreck the bank.

On Saturday a train of empty coal cars on the Canadian Pacific struck a large rock on the line in the mountains above North Bend, B. C., and jumping from the track the whole train rolled down an embankment nearly two hundred feet high. The cars and engine were smashed to atoms. Fortunately no one was hurt, the train hands jumping and saving their lives.

UNITED STATES.

The great strike of engineers at Blackburn has ended, the masters having partially conceded the demands made by their employees.

At Callicoon, N. Y., the snow was so deep that a funeral had to be postponed for five days, and some farmers were housed in for a week.

A Philadelphia cigar-making firm was permitting its employes to smoke 600 cigars per day. An attempt was made to cut off this privilege and a strike was the result. No monopoly must be allowed to show its hydrahead.

A Baltimore paper says that "Detroit has more homely girls to the square acre than any other city in the world." This is another instance of the fact that Providence, for reasons of its own, sometimes permits a blood-stained wretch to live on.

J. K. Perriman, who is under arrest at Grand Rapids, Mich., for bigamy, put in a very novel defence. He says that he is subject to fits of aberration of the mind, and that if he ever married more than one woman he has forgotten all about the matter.

B. Napoli, an Italian ranchman at Dayton, Nev., discovered one of his cows choking on a potato. He thrust in his hand and succeeded in pushing the obstruction down the cow's throat, but when he undertook to withdraw his arm the cow shut down on it like a vise and kept her hold until her jaws were pried apart with a crowbar. The bones and flesh of his arm were so crushed that amputation will be necessary.

The Germans recently attempted a "minor mobilisation" experiment near Metz. The railroad station master received at 1 o'clock an order to prepare coffee for 2,800 men at 4, and a dinner for the same number at 6.30. At 1 o'clock 2,800 men came in, had their coffee and took the train for another station, and at 6.30 the next 2,800 promptly appeared, dined and went to the next station, where they had coffee, and both parties returned to their quarters the next morning. The attempt was highly successful.

The Press in Russia.

The London Mail publishes a letter written by the editor of Gutzuk's Gazette in Moscow, to a subscriber in England who complained of the irregular arrival of the paper. The statements, which may, we presume, be accepted as facts, bring into gloomy relief the tyranny of the press censorship in Russia. The editor, A. Gatzuk, undertakes to explain why it was that after appearing with unfailing regularity for twelve years his paper became irregular of a sudden. Through the influence of Katkoff, who used to praise the freedom of press and speech enjoyed in Russia, M. Gatzuk says the paper underwent such tortures at the hands of the Censor and the Minister of the Home Department, Tolstoy, as "could not be borne by any paper in the whole world, even during one year." These tortures were "the frequent confiscation of single numbers; refusal even of permission to state that the non-appearance of the paper was not the fault of the editor; the forced suspension of the paper in the busiest time for subscriptions; the prohibition of the retail sale for a whole year; and, finally, the closing of our printing office (the oldest private printing house in Russia) and keeping it under seals without being allowed even to sell it." In order to secure the regular appearance of the paper the publishers decided in 1887 to submit it to the "preliminary censorship," in which case the responsibility falls on the Censor. "But the Press Department contrived even then to throw obstacles in the way, and at last, on the 20th of October, by order of the Minister Tolstoy, without the usual statement of the motives," the paper was prohibited for eight months. The chief manager of the Press Department explained verbally that this penalty, equivalent to the fine of 80,000 roubles worth, was inflicted for a private letter, written by the editor to the Censor, the tone of which the latter deemed insulting. "Against this decision there was no appeal; no possibility of self-defence through the press, nor even of sending letters to each subscriber, as such letters would be looked upon as acts of hostility to the Government. If all this be true, M. Gatzuk may well say that he who knows the real situation of the press in Russia, and what an honest journalist, unable to sell his conscience, has to undergo, will not reprove them for the sudden irregularity in their editions."

The Italians in Abyssinia.

The apparently slow progress of the Italians in their Abyssinian Campaign has given rise to some wonder at the extreme caution manifested, and some suspicion of reverses not allowed to come to the knowledge of the public. The real explanation seems to be that the Italians have no intention of climbing Abyssinia's mountain stronghold 7,000 feet above the level of the sea, or of attempting to repeat, in the face of solidly hostile tribes the march, which, notwithstanding the neutrality or sympathy of the intervening races, cost England nine millions of pounds sterling. What Italy really wants is, it appears, a secure hold upon the port and colony at Massowah, and what her forces are really trying to do, is to make the surrounding territory practically impregnable. If the Abyssinians show equal good sense by refusing to leave their native fortresses to attack the Italian fortifications on the seashore, not much blood may be lost in the campaign. At the same time the case is rather a hard one for King John and his people, who, it is said, want nothing but a right of transit through the territory in question to the sea coast. Massowah is, it appears, practically the only port through which they can carry on the commerce with foreign nations which they are anxious to establish. Had England remained in possession, this privilege would, no doubt, have been readily granted, and it is not easy to see what Italy has to gain by refusing it. It would seem certainly that King John had some reason to complain of having been left in the lurch by England, who, when she handed over Massowah district to another nation, might, in consideration of King John's friendly action in relieving the Soudan garrisons, at least have stipulated to reserve Abyssinia's commercial rights or privileges. Possibly a natural resentment may have had something to do with the failure of the recent British Embassy to King John to counsel peace.

Sad Result of a Silly Joke.

Last night a happy crowd of young folks met at a merry-making at the house of William Means, a well-to-do farmer in the neighborhood of Hillsboro, O. While the fun was at its height, two Sisters named Stover left the house and dressed up in a ghostly fashion. They wrapped themselves in sheets, put on false faces made of dough, and then burst suddenly upon the guests. Four young ladies fainted at the sight of the apparitions. Two were restored to consciousness without trouble, but two others, Dora Atkins and Lizzie Clancy, were restored only to pass into a condition of frightful delirium, screaming and crying constantly. The physicians have but slender hope of the recovery of their reason.

A Yankee Farmer's Conclusions.

Fustly (as the preacher says)—S' long as any of his truck has to hunt a furrin markit the farmers' got t' take furrin prices fer it all, wher'er it gits exported or not.

Sack'n'dly—S' long as any such truck as he's a-buyn comes from abroad he hez t' pay furrin price and duty and freight and handling fer it all, American's well as the rest.

Thirdly—Th' only way fer a farm to be doubled in value by manufactur' enterprize is its bein' turned inter town lots, or a cabbage garden (see'n' cabbidges ain't imported) or a berryin' ground fer himsel' f' his family, wher' they've all starved t' death in th' fosterin' other folks' infants besides his own.

A Modest, Sensitive Woman.

Often shrinks from consulting a physician about functional derangement, and prefers to suffer in silence. This may be a mistaken feeling, but it is one which is largely prevalent. To all such women we would say that one of the most skillful physicians of the day, who has had a vast experience in curing diseases peculiar to women, has prepared a remedy which is of incalculable aid to them. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money refunded. See guarantee printed on bottle wrapper.

Nausea and faintness in him rise,
Brow racking pains assail him.

Sick headache! Butere long comes ease,
His stomach settles into peace,
Within his head the throbbings cease—
Pierce's Pellets never fail him!

Nor will they fail anyone in such a dire predicament. To the dyspeptic, the bilious, and the constipated, they are alike "a friend in need and a friend indeed."
