MANITOBA'S SURPLUS WHEAT.

There is often more truth than poetry in the saying, "It is an ill wind that blows good to no person." The correctness of this axiom will no doubt be felt this year in the Province of Manitoba, where the yield of wheat is very large compared to many European countries which are generally noted for extensive exports in that commodity. From latest reports it is learned that the Old World will require some 80,000,000 bushels more than her harvest this year will produce. France, which is always looked upon as a great producer, will be compelled to import for herself several millions of bushels. The United States will have wheat to spare, but is not in a position to do very much in the way of supplying the demand. With regard to Russia and India, later reports are unfavorable, and since the recent storms in Great Britain it is estimated this latter Kingdom will have to draw on other countries to the extent of fully 170,000,000 bushels.

In Manitoba the season has been most favorable for the development of grain, and with very few exceptions the reports are encouraging. Here and there a section has been injured by frosts, but happily these are only exceptional cases. Qu'Appelle district boasts of an average of 35 bushels to the acre for wheat, and other cereals in proportion. The number of acres under cultivation throughout the Province and the North West exceeds that of any previous year, and this, coupled with the fact that the yield is heavy and the grain of excellent quality, assures us that a large quantity of Manitoba's wheat will this year cross the Atlantic. With a few seasons like the present, the sturdy yeomanry of the West would begin to forget their former hardships.

NEWMARKET AND THE S. A.

There seems to be something lax in the manner in which Newmarket's authorities pretend to dispense justice to the citizens. Last Saturday night the Salvation Army, consisting of some dozen members, were arrested and placed in the lock-up in that town. The charge preferred against them was blocking up the doors of some of the business places and rendering the sidewalks impassable. The constable had on different occasions warned the Army that they would get into trouble, but the warning was unheeded, hence the arrest. After a half-hour's imprisonment the alleged culprits were bailed out, who immediately marched to the place where they had been previously arrested, and again the same obstruction took place. The weak point seems to be in the authorities allowing them to hold their position the rest of the evening without molestation. Had they been guilty of a misdemeanor at eight o'clock, they should have been held doubly guilty when they showed a determination to repeat the offence an hour afterwards in defiance of the law.

If the Army were obstructing the thoroughfare to the inconvenience of pedestrians, and to the detriment of store-keepers, the town authorities did not exceed their duty in removing the obstruction. But by permitting the religious enthusiasts to again "hold the fort" without hindrance, it savors too much of persecution in the first case.

Merchandise is only one part of our ideal store-keeping. We make that part as thrifty as our concentrated energies can make it. In sunrise or sunset lands or at home, there's no new thing worth buying that has deservedly won fame but we find it out and whisk it here by steamer or rail or both, if it is a thing that should be here, and you know our getting powers enable us to mark our goods when first opened up for sale at so slight an advance on cost as only a business house can, that in every instance buys and sells for cash, and consequently raises a golden partition between its business and the bad debts that are always so closely connected with a credit system. We leave you to find out the many clogs that are on the selling wheel of a credit system, and then study a cash system as ours, whose smooth running wheel is not only unimpeded by bad debts and their consequent book-keeping accessories, but that is also oiled by the manufacturer's discount for the race it is sure to win. The goal being cheapest and best selling.

From day to day, month to month and year to year, busy minds are planning new things and better things for you. There's no "Good enough" point for us. Better qualities, better shapes, better service is the all-year-round aim. The yesterday's best won't do for to-day. The look is all the time ahead.

And yet buying and selling is only one part of our doing here. While we are extending our negotiations all over the globe, and bringing together the useful products of every clime, there's just as earnest thought to make your coming here pleasant, whether you wish to buy or not.

It's something for you to know that in the heart of this great city there's an all-year-round resting place where you are always welcome. It may not altogether be devoid of value for those of you who intend visiting the Exhibition to know that you can come here, bring your parcels, wraps and bags with you, and have them checked and cared for free of charge, at the Enquiry Office, that ladies have access to the neatly appointed toilet rooms on the second floor, and that every facility is extended to make you think of the great store as a resting place.

Visit the store and see the sights, whether you purchase or not.

Trust our Mail Order Department with your purchasing. It is under skilful management and has an efficient corps. The interests are about equal. They try to please. You wish to be pleased. Sample pieces on application. Address,
