

NEWS OF THE DAY,

CANADIAN.

Natural gas is flowing in good volume from the test well at Whitby. The unprecedented rainy period in the vicinity of Montreal is playing havoc with the crops. The next annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science will be held in Toronto. The Canadian Pacific Railway Land Department is offering prizes for the best exhibits of grain sent by agents. A freight train on the Manitoba road ran into a herd of cattle near Fort Budford, injuring five trainmen and killing a hundred cattle. The Dominion Militia Department has declined to grant permission to the Royal Scots to visit Albany during the Burns celebration.

Messrs. A. W. Morris & Brother, of Montreal, will open a twine factory in Port Hope next December, which will employ one hundred hands.

The next annual session of the Commandery of the Coloured Knights Templar at Michican and Ontario will be held in August, 1889, at Chatham, Ont.

Permits are now being issued to all hotels in the North West with a capacity of twelve bedrooms and stabling for five horses to sell beer containing four per cent. of alcohol.

A serious railway collision occurred on the Canadian Pacific railway yesterday near Montreal, by which three freight cars were demolished and several head of cattle killed.

The construction of the Joggins raft saved $15,000 in transportation expenses. It is proposed to repeat the experiment, as it facilitates the sale of Canadian timber in the United States market.

Owing to some misunderstanding, the trip which the American Science Association had arranged to make to the Canadian North-West this year has fallen through. It will probably be made next year.

A general permission is given by the Roman Catholic Arch bishop to all his priests in the Montreal diocese to allow their parishioners to do harvest work on Sundays, where the crops are likely to suffer by delay.

At a special meeting of the Toronto City Council the other afternoon, the question as to whether the contract for a pavement should be awarded to a local or an American firm raised considerable discussion and much strong feeling.

The death rate of the city of Montreal is something startling. According to the Board of Health returns, the total number of deaths in July was 691, which gives a death rate of 42.57 per thousand. This is the highest rate of mortality for cities on the continent. The filthy condition of the streets, the want of sanitary arrangements, and impure drinking water, are said to be the causes of the excessive mortality.

The demand for Canadian produce in England is enormously increasing. The sale of Canadian apples in Covent Garden market is growing steadily. Smoked hams from the Dominion now find a ready sale all over London. Canadian cheese is also growing in favour, and excellent makes are being retailed at seven pence per pound, and the general opinion of the consumer is that the Canadian cheese is as good as the dearest American and English cheddar.

The wife of Anton Crealake, a Polish labourer in Duluth, Minn., gave birth the other day to four children, two boys and two girls, all healthy and well.

At a meeting of New York coal agents yesterday, it was agreed that an increase of from 25 to 50 cents per ton, according to the distance from the mining points, should go into force.

The American Government will subsidize an American company to the extent of $50,000 for a year's service in carrying mails between the States and New South Wales, and the Oceanic Company will probably get the contract.

The movement for the naturalization of British subjects in the United States is meeting with much success. The Chicago British-American Association, which was formed last winter, now numbers 3,000 members, and its strength is being rapidly augmented. There are fourteen branches of the Association in the city, one of them being composed of Welshmen.

What the Baby Thinks.

BY EMMA A. OFFER.

It's a funny place that 'y've put me in— A peculiar place, why I can't begin To tell all the curious things I see— Things that are certainly new to me.

I think I'd been consulted, I'd Have arranged things more from a baby's side; For as things are now no wonder we squall— Babies don't have any show at all!

I know that I'm little and fat and red, With toothless gums and a bare, round head; But what's the reason they talk as though I hadn't the brains of a lump of dough?

"Cute little sink 'y'! See it's eyes so 'oo!" "Does it 'love' it's mamma? Why I can't begin To tell all the curious things I see— Do they think I like such remarks as those?"

Do they think I enjoy the rubber ring They have tied to my bib with an old r-d string, When my oldest sister plays 'most all day With a doll that I want the very worst way?

I'm trundled about in a baby cart; It's enough to break any baby's heart, When other people have lots of fun On velocipedes. Why can't I have one?

My Brother Tom and Cousin Ted Go out and slide with a big blue sled; I wish to ask, and I want to know If there's any reason why I can't go?

I'm fed on milk, while others—well, They're really delicious, the things I smell! I'm rocked to sleep when the sun is high, But nobody else is—I wonder why?

I'm kissed and I'm bounced, and I'm tousled up; I've a rattle of tin and a silver cup; I'm fussed over daytimes and walked with nights— But it counts for nothing; I want my rights!

Beautiful Thoughts Have Wings.

BY LAURA BELL.

Beautiful birds have plumage, Beautiful thoughts have wings; Stars shine far above the night Of earth's vague wh springs. Under the earth's broad bosom Never a beauty lies But shall burn its way to the rim of day, And flash to our wondering eyes.

Beautiful gems lie hidden Under the fold of earth; Even the slime hides a thought sublime Till the time of the lily's birth. Even the birds worth creeping Wingless and featherless, Till plume by plume, like roses' bloom, They borrow'd the singer's dress.

Beautiful birds have plumage, Beautiful thoughts fly high; The poet's song cannot slumber long, Its track is the boundless sky. Under the infinite heaven Never a wing unfurled But shall find its way to the verge of day, And flash on some wondering world.

THE WILD BEASTS OF INDIA.

Legal Measures Taken For Their Destruction.

It is interesting to observe that the spread of Western civilization in India is having the effect of making necessary legal measures for the protection of wild birds and game, and at the same time is bringing about the gradual extermination of the wild beasts and poisonous snakes with which that country has always been infested.

As the extent of the land under cultivation has increased, beasts of prey have of course been destroyed or driven off by the clearing of forests and the incoming of man, and innocent herds of deer and antelopes have gone with them. The government has also stimulated the slaughter of noxious animals by giving pecuniary rewards for their destruction, in consequence of which bounties 22,417 wild beasts and 417,596 venomous snakes are officially returned as having been destroyed in 1886. Meantime English sportsmen are keeping up the pursuit of wild animals, in which they have been assiduously engaged for a century past.

From every direction, therefore, the beasts of prey are attacked by man and civilization, so that their practical extermination has become a question of time only, though plainly it must be a long time, whereas under the old Hindoo and Mohammedan dynasties they enjoyed comparative immunity. So far as we know, no rewards were offered then for their destruction, and they were hunted merely to obtain living wild animals for the menageries of the native potentates, who delighted in the fights of wild beasts.

But in this wholesale destruction, wild birds and game desirable to preserve are included, so that in 1879 a law for

THE PROTECTION OF WILD ELEPHANTS.

Special law was enacted, and last year Lord Dufferin and his Legislative Council promulgated a new game law of more general application. The wanton slaughter of wild elephants had been carried to such an extent that it seemed as if the species might become extinct in India, as the buffalo is becoming in this country. There had also been a great increase in the mortality among tame elephants employed for military purposes, particularly during the protracted campaigns of the Mutiny of 1857, the elephant, despite his huge strength, being of delicate constitution, and requiring more care than he could receive in such campaigning. The consequence was that the price of elephants more than doubled, and as tame elephants do not breed in captivity the only source of further supply lay in the capture of the wild animals.

Therefore, in 1879 a law was passed to protect the wild elephants from being hunted for the sake of their ivory, and to require the professional hunters of elephants to take out a license, under which the Government has the first choice of all newly captured animals for its military purposes. The law of Lord Dufferin, enacted last year, bears a general likeness to our own game laws, provides for a close or breeding season, and protects many insectivorous birds as valuable allies of the farmer, and also the pea fowl, which is regarded as a sacred bird in many parts of India.

It seems that almost every game bird that had its breeding place in India was pursued during the whole twelve months of the year, the migratory birds, of course, faring better, because they

from the nets and traps and guns of their human enemies. The Commissioner of Sindh reported, for example, that 30,000 black partridges were destroyed in the course of a few days, to supply the European demand for their skins, and as cheap game have now got into the hands of the native bird slayers, the slaughter was enormous and continuous among all varieties valuable for their plumage. Sportsmen also complained of the scarcity of game birds and measures for their preservation adopted in the West had to be applied to the East also, so that they might be left at peace in their breeding season.

The protection was also extended by Lord Dufferin's law to all animals of game not noxious in order that the deer and antelope might not be driven out or destroyed. But of course this feature has to be carefully guarded that beasts of prey may not be included, for even now the loss of human life because of these fierce animals is very great annually, as this table of 1886 shows:

Table with 2 columns: Killed by wild elephants, Killed by hyenas, Killed by tigers, Killed by leopards, Killed by bears, Total.

The number of these animals killed in 1886 by natives under the stimulus of the bounties offered was:

Table with 2 columns: Wild elephants, Wolves, Tigers, Hyenas, Leopards, Other animals, Bears, Total.

It will be seen, therefore, that except so far as the tigers were concerned, man had a vast advantage in the slaughter. But the tigers lost only 1,464, while they killed 928. In some of the provinces the tigers were far ahead. In lower Bengal for example, but only 245 tigers were killed. Among the "other animals" mentioned in the tables the jackal is the chief, and their victims are doubtless many more than officially returned. The list of these unspecified animals includes, besides, wild boars, bisons, and crocodiles. There were also 55,023 cats killed by wild beasts in 1886, tigers destroying 23,769 and leopards 22,275. The number of human beings killed by snakes was returned as 22,134, and of cattle as 2,514.

580 PERSONS WERE KILLED BY TIGERS,

The serpent is accordingly the most deadly enemy of man in India, nearly ten times as many perishing by his bite as are killed by wild beasts. In the province of Bengal alone more than 10,000 persons died of snake bites, and the snakes on their part suffered a loss of 417,596, for which bounties were paid.

But rewards for killing snakes are not offered in all the provinces, the experience of the Governor of Bengal some years ago having shown that in consequence of such rewards almost the whole community went into snake hunting as a regular business, and the magistrates complained that they could not carry on their ordinary duty because of the stench of the putrid bodies brought to them. It is also suspected that the wily natives sometimes actually bred snakes to get the bounty, as wolves were at one time bred in parts of Europe for the same purpose. An English sportsman, in a recent volume on sport in eastern Bengal, spoke of it as a fortunate fact that no Englishmen were ever bitten by snakes within his experience, and he gives Sir Joseph Frayer as authority for the statement that "a cobra's fang is harmless if it has passed through a piece of good English boot leather."

The figures we have given show that the work of exterminating the beasts of prey and the poisonous snakes of India must yet be continued for generations. They must be still plenty when thousands are destroyed annually by the natives under the spur of the bounties.

Inquiring child—Father what is the difference between sitting up and sitting down? Father (with perfect confidence in his ability to explain)—Why, my child, when somebody is standing up and he seats himself, he sits down, and when he doesn't go to bed and sits down, he sits up. Then, with a dawning doubt of his ability to make it quite clear—You see my child, if he sits down, why he—I mean if he sits up—Go to your mother, and don't ask me questions when I'm busy.

The Burdens of Womanhood.

Thousands of women are silently suffering untold misery, simply because they shrink from consulting a physician in those numerous complaints arising from functional irregularities and disorders. Many a modest girl or woman prefers to bear her heavy burden in silence rather than to go to the family physician for advice. All sufferers from this class of disorders can, however, find prompt and sure relief in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a specific in such cases, and has brightened the lives of countless women by restoring them to perfect health.

Poison the fountain, and the stream is impure; poison the blood, and its taint is carried through the entire system—those innumerable veins and arteries carry disease and death instead of life and vitality. As a result, you have Headache, Sorefula, Dyspepsia, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and General Debility. An inactive Liver means poisoned blood; Constipation means poisoned blood; Kidney disorder means poisoned blood. The great antidote for impure blood is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Acting directly upon the affected organs, restores them to their normal condition. "A word to the wise is sufficient."
