The Labor Problem.

Francis A. Walker whose criticism of Edward Bellamy's theory of an industrial army, as enunciated in "Looking Backward," attracted so much notice from those inter ested in the social questions of the day, has an interesting article in the June Atlantic on the eight hour labor agitation. The spirit of the article is friendly towards the workingmen, with whom Mr. Walker has evidently no quarrel. He recognizes their lat as being hard and hence for a time where lot as being hard, and hopes for a time when a more satisfactory condition of things will exist. This does not prevent him, however, from carefully examining the remedies with which would be reformers would cure the present social ills. After pointing out some of the untenable positions of economists on the one hand and labor agitators on the other-that under no circumstances is the state warranted in interfering in the con Stanley has been appointed Governor-General of the Congo Free State, his duties to commence in 1891. appreciable decrease of production or dim-Dean Alford, has won first place in the inution of wages, the reduction from ten to classical tripos Cambridge.

Mr. Walker proceeds to state his objections to the present movement. Four difficulties present themselves in the way of the State nterfering to adopt such a law : First, Mr. Walker is of the opinion that this is a matter which should be left to debate and decision Lord Lansdowne has sent $100 from India to be added to the fund for crecting a monu-ment in Quebee to Major Shortt and Staff-Sergeant Wallick. The fund now amounts to $2,800. Germany on the East African question are agreeable to themselves. Second, the right progressing satisfactorily. It is said Ger- of the minority in such a matter demand consideration. If six hundred workingmen are willing and desirous to secure greater leisure at the sacrifice of some part relater at the sacrince of some part of their wages they have no moral right by a mere majority of votes to refuse to four hundred fellows the privilege of earning all thewages they can in a longer day of work, always within the limits of health. Third, con-ceding for the moment the desirableness of a further reduction in the heave of labor of a further reduction in the hours of labor, it is a very grave mistake to undertake so long a step at once as that which is proposed from ten hours, or more to eight. Fourth, the uniform application to all trades and avo cations of an eight hour law would be an injustice as between workman and work man. The several trades and avocations differ so widely among themselves, in the conditions under which they may be pursued as to make any single rule the height of in-justice. It is evidently impossible so to control the conditions under which labor is conduct ed as to make it compatible with political

"Black Dogs at Midnight."

Not always is sleep "tired nature's sweet estorer." Sometimes, instead of a balm, it brings a bugaboo in the shape of the nightmare. Man is a wonderful piece of work, but his machinery may be thrown out of gear and set a whizzing by so slight a thing as a late supper. An indigestible Welsh rarebit at 11 p. m. may result in a big suffocat-ing black dog across his chest at 1 o'clock in the morning; an overplus of oaf-pastry, which his gastric juices cannot conveniently assimilate, may precipitate him from a preci-pice in dreamland into a bottomless abass; or a surfeit of pate de foi gras send him to a Morphean gallows, there to endure all the tortures of actual strangulation. This sort of thing, by the way, is only one remove from apoplexy, and the incubs-ridden victim of inordinate and untimely self-indulgence is likely enough to be at last bestridden in his sleep by a nightmare too strong for his vitality -even death. The term nightmare is supposed to have been derived from Mara, the name of a demon which, according to the Scandinavian mythology, pounced upon men in their sleep and held the will in thraldom. The old Saxons called the distemper Elf-sidenne, or elf-squatting. With the doctors it is Ephi altes, from a mythic giant of that name who undertook to climb to heaven, but, missing his foothold, tumbled into the fathomless depths. Most of us have probably been con-vulsed in our sleep with the same sort of horror which the tripped-up Titan is fabled to have experienced during his "lofty fall" from the celestial battlements. There can be little doubt that many of the spectres of the dark ages were Maras begotten of in-Your Saxon gormandizer, who digestion. sometimes feasted far into the night on boar's flesh and venison pastry, washing them down with frothy mead, must have gone to bed with his stomach in a nice condition. No wonder that of the internal fermentation, caused by such stuffing and swilling, hob-goblins and hippogriffs in endless variety were born. The surest way to avoid the nightmare and procure that sound, health-ful repose with which each day's life should be "rounded off," is to live temperately, regularly and honestly. Ay, honestly, for a troubled conscience, as well as an overladen diaphragm, may engender evil dreams.

A British Columbian Marvel.

A very interesting work just published on the Glacie s of the Selkirks, and giving in popular form some of the results of explora-tions made in these mountains for the Royal Geographical Society of England, mentions a strange bouquet-making creature called the Sewellell as a curious inhabitant of the rocky wilds of our Pacific province. In a few hours old, died a few minutes after climbing the wooded steeps on the marge of a the mother." glacier, Mr. Grant and his companion discovered along their path bouquets of flowers well arranged with their stems laid closely together. Very naturally they concluded that some one had been there before them, but yet the place was so inaccessible and so much out of the way of any settler or tour-ist or possible visitor other than an explorer who felt it his bounden duty to make the arduous ascent, that they instituted en-quiries, with the result that they learned of the existence of this flower-loving creature. No reasonable explanation is offered of this strange habit, nor is any hint given of what the "creature" with so human an instinct is like. The author evidently is not venturing on a joke, but the men-tion of the whole thing seems so like a bit of the fabulous, such as might adorn a fairy tale or fit the pages of a traveller in the days when barnacle geese were hatched the days when barnacle geese were natched on trees and fierce, headless men roamed the forests of the Upper Nile, that one can only regret that Mr. Grant has not anticipated the curiosity of his readers and departed from the beaten track of his book to give a short chapter on the Sewellell. The name appears to be that sometimes given to a little animal somewhat resembling a beaver, but it may be doubted whether its flower-gathering propensity has hitherto een known to naturalists.

A Banshee Clock. "We have not exactly a banshee in our family who foretells by her wailing an ap-proaching death," said a lady to the writer yesterday, "but we have had mysterious warning of such given us time and time again by an old clock which has been in our family for the last 120 years. The works were ruined by a shot fired by a British soldier during the Revolutionary war at my great-grandfather, which shot, passing entirely through his body, killed him instant-ly and then broke the glass door, penetratng the works and stopping them, forever, for though innumerable attempts have been made to repair them, it seemed that some unknown power kept the clock silent except when death flapped his black wings over the household ; so it was banished to the garret. "The first instance of its warning was when my grandfather died. He had been very ill, but the physicians had at last pronounced him out of danger, and his family were just congratulating themselves on this news when the loud tones of a clock striking twelve, slowly and solemnly, like the tolling of a bell, was heard. "Why, what is that?" said my grandmother. There was but one other clock in the house, which was in full view, so it was evident that it was not that one. 'It is my father's clock,' said her husband. 'It has struck the close of my day,' and before they could reach him he was dead, just as the last stroke died away.

"This occurrence was repeated when my grandmother herself lay dying. The old clock struck 12 just as she drew her last breath and my father, at last believing that there was something supernatural in the affair, had the old works removed, leaving only the hollow case; but a few years after, when my hollow case; but a rew years atter, when my brother was brought home dangerously wounded after the battle of Chancellorsville, the long, slow, solemn tones of the old clock were heard as before, and poor Leon's life went out as they died on the air. They struck for my father and for my little child, me died has very. The clock warned me who died last year. The clock warned me, too, when my sister died in Japan. I had just gota letter from her, in which she had spoken of feeling very well, when I heard the old clock, which was in a remote store room, strike so rapidly that the notes almost mingled, and then began slowly to strike another twelve strokes. 'My sister is dead.' another twelve strokes. 'My sister is dead.' I said to my husband, 'and has died very suddenly, but who the other strokes are for I cannot imagine.' My husband tried to reason and then to ridicule the idea, but I mourned for my sister as earnestly as though I had seen her die, and when, as I knew I should, I heard the news of her sudden death I found it had taken place on the same day and at the same hour as that on which the clock struck, allowing for the difference of time between Japan and Boston. Her baby,

The Sunday School Grand Army,

The progress of Sunday school work will appear in the following statistics collated under the auspices of the International Sunday School Convention, which metat Atlanta, Georgia, in 1878. Ten to 18 per cent would probably represent the status of gain for the present time. At that time there were in the United States 78,046 Sunday schools, 553,100 teachers, 6,504,054 scholars, or a total of 7,357,154 teachers and scholars, 119,-221 having been received into the churches from the Sunday schools, Canada had 5,395 schools, 41,693 teachers, and 339,943 scholars. For Great Britain, there were in 1876, 378,-762 scholars, an incrense of 186,418 in ten years. At present there are schools in successful operation in France, Germany, Swit-zerland, Sweden, Spain, Italy, and Portugal. They are pushing into Asia and Africa with the missionaries. There are, undoubtedly, upward of a million teachers in the world engaged in this beautiful and beneficent work, and they have under their instruction ten million of scholars.

Origin of Texts.

The custom of taking a text as a basis of sermon is older than the Bible itself. Ezra, we are told, accompanied by several Levites in a public congregation of men and women, ascended a pulpit, opened the book of the law, and after addressing a prayer to the Deity, to which the people said amen, read in the book of the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading (Nehemiah viii, 8). Previous to the time of Ezra, the Patri-archs delivered, in public assemblies, either prophecies or moral instructions for the edification of the people : and it was not until the return of the Jews from the Babylonish captivity, during which time they had al-most lost the language in which the Pen-titeuch was written, that it became necessary to explain, as well as to read the Scriptures to them. In later times the book of Moses was thus read in the synagogues every Sab-bath day (Acts xv. 21.) 'To this custom out conformed; in the synagogue ar Savior Nazareth he read a passage from the Prophet Isaiah, then closing the book, returned to the priest, and preached from the text.

Whether from too high living or too little exercise deponent saith not, but the latest report is, that the Czar is growing very fat, and that with his increasing obesity there is a corresponding increase in his natural indol ence. So averse has he became to details connected with the affairs of state that many of his officials are said to have adopted the policy of saying in a word that all is going on smoothly and then going out and doing about as they please. Perhaps it is as well for the peace of Eorope that the man in whose hands such power lies should be too whose names such power nession use too indolent to stir up a strife which if once be gun might outlive the present generation. If Europe's tranquility depends upon a continu-ance of his present condition, few will pray that the scales may be less severely strained when he steps upon them.

The theory of Prince Bismarck that the dis content of the masses in Russia and Germany is due to education is one that will hardly find many friends among the edu-cated and intelligent classes. The ex-Chancellor says: "Over-education has led to much dissatisfaction and disappointment in Germany, but in Russia it has led to disaffection and conspiracy. There are ten times as many people educated for the higher walks as there are places to fill. Further, education is making pedantic theorists and visionaries unfit for constitutional government. It would be madness to put such men in authority. The Russians do not know yet what they want. They must therefore be ruled with a rod of iron." Prince Bis-marck would have come nearer the truth if instead of condemning the quantity, he had found fault with the quality of the education. A course of instruction that begets an aversion to honest labor, however menial, tell a gentleman yesterday that every male or renders a man less capable to perform should learn the manly art of self-defense. the duties of even manual callings is sadly deficient in character. He Took a Bible.

An interesting story, apropos of Stanley, is given in the British Weekly. It was told originally at a conference of workers at the Bible House, Queen Victoria street, London. In the course of the meeting Sir Harry Varney rose and said—"I have something to tell you that I am sure you will all be very elad to hear. I was sitting a few days ago next to Mr. Stanley, the great African trav-eller, and in conversation he said—'Just before I started for Africa, Sir William Mac-kinnon said to me—" Now I want to give you something, but I should like you to choose for yourself. I shall have the utmost pleasure in presenting you with anything you like. Never mind the expense; just say what you would like." 'I replied, 'said the traveller, 'give me a Bible.' The desired gift was soon in my possession, just the Bible I wanted. And during my absence in Africa I have read that Bible through three times.'" It need scarcely be added that the announcement was received by the meeting at the Bible House with the utmost delight and heartiest applause.
