"Canada and the Canadians." It may be presumed that those Americans who had the privilege of reading "Canada and the Canadians," an article on our country and its institutions, by Hon. J.W. Longley, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, and published in Harper's Weekly of Nov. 8th., will have their views somewhat clarified and enlarged as to the character of their neighin Parliament the Parnelite amendment to bors, and the extent and resources of the the address in reply to the Speech from the Dominion. Considering the comprehensive-Throne. This implies that he will lead the ness of the subjects he undertook to discuss, and the necessary limitations of a newspaper article, Mr. Longley has done his work remarkably well. He has indicated the extent of the Dominion, naming the provinces and territories which are included; has given a concise but clear description of the Constitution of Canada, showing wherein it resembles and differs from the British Constitution on the one hand, and the American on the other; has described the federal and provincial governments, pointing out broadly the functions of each; has shown the rapid progress of the country both in revenue and ex-denditure, in imports and exports, since Confederation; has briefly discussed some of the great national problems now confronting, or bout to confront, the Canadian people, particularly the French problem and the ques-tion of Canada's future destiny; and has con-cluded with a prophecy that "in fifty years time the world will see a community arising in the northern half of North America, following in the footsteps of the great nation to the south of it, in industrial prosperity and national power, and leaving European empires far behind."

Known to be temporarily absent, such as sail-ors and soldiers, of whom a special census is taken, is added. This system takes no account of whether the persons enumerated are permanent or transient.

Many of Mr. Longley's utterances are unquestionably true expressions of Canadian sojourning for a time in the cities, or city thought and feeling. For instance, he people in the rural regions. voices the popular sentiment when in speaking of the Canadian Senate he says: ' This body is the most effect and valueless that The New York Art Association has sold ferring to the idea that Canada cannot be coerced into annexation with the United States, he says: "The history of mankind is eloquent of the fact that no English comment that they carry their loyalty and self-respect in a peddler's pack. Jingoes exist in Canada as well as in the United States, and say that the Canadians who share the opinion that our present colonial relation is "humilfor a change does not obtain to any appreciable extent. When our population shall have grown to four or five times its present number then it might be humiliating to continue as a colony. Then too it will be time enough to talk of separating from the mother country. At present what could Canada do to maintain her rights with other nations. No, Canadians do not feel humiliated by the present condition of things which "brings us all the advantages of British prestige for our protection, and enables us to work out large problems of domestic economy undis-turbed by any haunting sense of foreign aggression, or any responsibility for the hap-penings of the world at large."

At a public meeting held at Duffield, England, the other evening, Mr. Chaplin, president of the British Board of Agri culture, said that he regretted that it was necessary to restrict the importation of cattle from infected countries, but the general result would be that more cattle would be reared at home. The McKinley law, he said, would certainly not make England less ob durate against the in portation of American

Our Population, "How many are we, and what system of enumeration will be adopted next April," are questions which are beginning to stir the minds of many Canadians. According to the decennial count of 1881 the population of the Dominion was 4,324,800 and the estimate for 1891, calculated by the logarithmetic process, is 5,279,377. Whether the actual number will exceed or fall short of this expectation can be positively know only when the enumeration is made. Mean while it is interesting to speculate on the results, and for the readers of Truth it may prove profitable as well. By a reference to cent issues of Truth it will be seen that the Publisher offers 336 cash prizes, of sums varying from $2 to $1000, which will be given away to those subscribers whose estimate is nearest the officially declared number. Read the conditions on which the prizes will be awarded and then send in your estimates. As to the methods of enumeration the choice lies between two systems know respectively as the d jure and the dc facto. According to the latter, which is the system that obtains in Britain, the attempt is made to ascertain the number of people in the country on a given night, by requiring every householder to write in a schedule prepared for the purpose the names of all persons sleeping under his or her roof that night. To the number thus obtained those who are country or whether they are rural dwellers

On the other hand the de jure system, which is considered the more practicable method for Canada, by enquiring of the head of the house who are temporarily absent, and passing by persons only temporarily present, seeks to ascertain the actual number of bona fide residents in the country, and to place each in the census district to which he propermunity was ever coerced or bullied into do-ing any thing. He does gross injustice to that the cities are in danger of being underthe Canadian people who supposes for a mo- rated and the rural sections overestimated, owing to the circumstance that many young persons, clerks, servants and others, who have come from the rural districts where these would be very glad to have events so their parents still reside, and who have no shape themselves that there should be con-intention of returning to their father's home, stant ill feeling between the two sections of are in danger of being included in the coun the Republican party that Secretary Blaine will be asked to run for the Presidencey next lection.

Deceiving Thousands of Emigrants.

A Vienna telegram says:-The emigration of peasants from Galicia and Poland, to Brazil continues on an increased scale. No fewer than 300,000 emigrants have, it is estimated, been shipped within the last few months by the Norddeutcher-Lloyd to Berlin. Numerous villages in Russian Poland are said to be almost depopulated, Canadian dairymen are to hold their own although the Government has forbidden emigration, and endeavours to prevent it, their processes and their product. No doubt by all means. The poor people, however, the suggestion will not be disregarded by wherever possible, steal out of the country. in the belief that they will receive, in Brazil, free grants of fertile land—a belief which is encouraged by the emigration agents by the dissemination of reports calculated to impose upon the credulity of their victims. Once ut of the country, the poor people are said to be outrageously treated by the emigration agents, and invariably find, on arriving in Brazil, that they are left entirely without resources.

Saying " Good Morning."

Just how to say it is what somebody wants to know. One of you, as impulsive as possible, bows as if all her heart was in it when she meets a man who is a mere acquaintance. Shall she then be surprised if the next time he is a bit familiar in his mode of conversation? Another, in her desire to be dignified, gives a rigid bow that announces her acceptance of a pleasant acquaintance under pro-Then when she meets him next chilling and decidedly unfriendly in his man

But what to do? You will have to act the happy medium: When you incline your head give a suggestion of a smile that means " know you;" but we don't tell any more than that in a public place. Women are said to have won battles by the sweet bows given to opposing generals. One should be thankful that one is not in the midst of any great battle now, except that wondrons battle of life when a smile and a pleasant greeting does more to remove the stumbling blocks from the way of the weary wanderer than anything else.

The "good morning" is the beginning of every day of life, and, my dear girl, to say it pleasantly is to open the golden door of a day and to make all the sunshine of life seem to rest upon you and reflect upon everybody else and make them feel pleasant, and that is a great deal. Can't you work fuster and find work easier when your heart is full of that liquid of love that we call "pleasantness?" Just think it over. It is worth while.
