In Loving Memory of Mrs. J. Brown.

The ship is anchored safe at last, And all life's stormy waves are past, No tear is felt at Jordan's tide; The Saviour is close at her side.

Though darkness was thy portion here, What will this light affliction be Compared with Immortality?

For six long years thy work was done | Thy words of love and sympathy Were aceper than the mighty sea.

Though from thine eyes the sight was gone, Which led thee on through life's rough way, In the sweet hope of endless day.

Had laid on thee the chastening rod; To try thy faith, and to prepare Thee for a higher mansion there.

But for a while, the hand of God

Could we but lift the curtain high, And view thee in Eternity, We would not wish thee back again, Although the parting gave such pain. Richmond Hill, Oct, 24th, 1892.
