No. 48.
JAMAICA.
By WM. HARRISON.

Sept. 25th, 1867, the sergeant and his regiment, the 29th foot, were ordered from Montreal for Hamilton, where our soldier spent his first Canadian winter in the McNab street barracks. The change of climate from 104 degrees in the shade in Malta to many degrees below zero in Canada was a great contrast to the regiment. The winter of 1867 was a severe one and much practice was done on snow shoes to climatise the soldiers.

On the 16th of March, 1868, the regiment was en route to Toronto and for a time occupied the Old Fort barracks. Ferian scares were still prevalent and the great battery of the Royal Horse Artillery, packed ready to march at a moment's notice, were stationed at the New Fort, the 13th Hussars occupying the Palace barracks altogether 1800 men who were all ordered to other quarters the following year. On the 6th of April of that year D'Arcy Magee was assassinated by Whalen in the Parliament buildings, Ottawa. After his trial and conviction there was an appeal for a new trial before the Judges at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. Meanwhile the prisoner was placed in the jail over the Don. Our soldier was one of twenty-four men who safe guarded him during his incarceration.

The watchfulness of the Canadian volunteers preventing any further attempts an invasion, the "regulars" were no longer needed. The 29th regiment of foot were ordered to Quebec on the 14th of May, 1869, and camped at Point Levi. Here the company were set to work on the forts with No. 2 Company of Sappers, and five months of the heaviest and most arduous labor were spent in the erection of Forts Nos. one, two and three. Another move was made by the regiment when on October 25th they were ordered to Jamaica, West Indies, to relieve the 28th regiment of foot.

On the way the company were wrecked in the mouth of the St. Lawrence, having to wait for a troopship from Liverpool, when they reached Halifax on the 8th of November. After a short stay the regiment re-embarked, and landed at Kingston, Jamaica, New Year's Day, 1870.
They were marched to the Newcastle barracks at the foot of the Blue Mountains. The 28th regiment of foot, which the 29th went to relieve, were almost annihilated by the yellow fever, and were but an attenuated remnant of their former strength. Preceded by what was known as the "black vomit," the fever set in with greater fatality than the cholera in Malta, and more than a hundred stalwart fellows of the 28th regiment of foot had fallen victims to the dreadful scourge. The fever in its most malignant form seemed to have had possession of the island. Near the barracks, on the side of a mountain, is the military burial ground. In it may be seen many hundreds of head-stones marking the last resting place of many a gallant fellow who had failed to respond to the call at the last muster roll. So dreadful was the scene as they stood among the dead and dying that the regiment were ordered to safer quarters on the Island of Barbadoes, a part of the company going to Trinidad.

On the 6th of April the 29th regiment, after all its wanderings, was ordered home to Ireland. The welcome news was echoed with intense satisfaction throughout the barracks and glad were the "boys" to bid good bye to the pestilential atmosphere of the fever stricken Islands and their sooty population. Few can realize the joy they felt when they set foot on the soil of Ould Ireland as they landed from Cork harbour on the 24th of April, 1873. Their destination was Templemore barracks, County of Tipperary.

During the whole of our soldier's term of enlistment the men of the regiment were never allowed to be idle. On the 20th of June they were set to work on the fortifications of the harbour and placed in position some of the largest Krupp guns. Their next move was to the Carragh camp, County of Kildare, where the time was spent in manoeuvring under a couple of Generals of Her Majesty's forces, having under their command 27,000 troops. The whole of the summer of 1874 was spent in marches, counter-marches, night-marches and sham battles.

At the Carragh camp our soldier's ten years' engagement to devote all his time, and his life if necessary, to Her Most Gracious Majesty's service, expired. He was strongly urged by his superior officer to re-enlist. With them a "regular" always has the preference. In case he should, as sometimes happens, receive a rifle's fatal bullet or a cannon's deadly contents, he would not feel the inconvenience as much as a raw recruit. On the 8th of Sept., 1874, the sergeant took his discharge, and left the army about as rich as when he enlisted, to better his circumstances and to see the world. On his departure his Colonel presented him with five shillings to enable him to reach his home at Inniskillen.

The council then adjourned until Tuesday, the 9th day of March next, to meet at 10 a.m.

Vellore.
Judging by the amount of merchandise hauled to the store, and the number of empty barrels and boxes returned to the city, the McDonald Bros. must be doing a good business.

Our school keeps up its regular attendance under Mr. H. J. Saigeon, and the pupils strive hard to have their names appear in a prominent place when the monthly reports are published in the paper.

An able-bodied individual over six feet in height, was caught in the act of taking barley from Squire McKinnon's barn one night last week. One of the McDonald Bros. returned from Maple between 10 and 11 o'clock on the night in question, and noticed a strange horse tied near the gate leading to the barn.

Having reported the incident to his brother at the store, the two mistrusted that something was wrong. They immediately awoke Mr. J. J. Cameron, who was not long dressing himself, and made haste to reach the spot with his rifle. He stole quietly up to the horse and sleigh while the others went to the house to awaken Mr. McKinnon. In a short time Mr. Cameron saw the burly intruder coming towards the sleigh with a bag on his back. When within a few yards of him the rifleman covered the stranger with his rifle, and demanded him to put up his hands. The latter obeyed without much hesitation and a dialogue ensued until the other interested parties returned with a lantern. The visitor claimed to be an honest man and said he went to the barn to give his horse a feed of oats. He said his name was Thompson and lived in Parkdale.

The township council met on Tuesday of this week. There was an unusually large number of visitors during the day, prominent among them being Messrs.
J. McNeil, T. Webster, R. Rumble, G.
Wallace, A. McNeil, A. Cameron, I.
Paterbaugh, G. W. High, H. Creighton, D. McDonald, J. McKinnon, and A.
McNaughton.
