As no correspondence from this place has appeared in your paper for some time, we venture to send you a few items just to show we are still in the world.

Most of the farmers in this locality have safely housed their fruit and root crops, which have been very good this year. They are now busy plowing, trying to "wind up" before Jack Frost puts a stop to their little game.

On Friday evening of last week Miss Grace Darling entertained a number of her friends. A most pleasant time was spent. Great amusement was derived from several parlor games. Refreshments of an excellent order were served during the evening, and needless to say all did justice to the same. At an early hour the gathering broke up, every person wishing the heroine many happy returns of the day, and expressing the pleasure of being present.

Miss M. Wakefield, who has been visiting at Thedford, returned home this week.

As usual, Hallowe'en "tricks" were many and varied in these parts.
