The Liberal.

RICHMOND HILL, March 22, 1900

GOLDEN WORDS.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, never loses an opportunity when speaking in public to remind his hearers of the necessity of peace and good-will among the different sects which make up the population of our Dominion. Whether in Protestant Ontario or Catholic Quebec he has always cautioned his audiences to be prepared to give and to take, and to make due allowances for the passions and prejudices of our fellow-countrymen. Many eloquent speeches along this line stand to his credit, and that delivered in the House of Commons on Tuesday of last week in reply to Mr. Bourassa with regard to sending the contingents to South Africa is no exception to the rule. The concluding words of his brilliant speech were as follows:—

"To-day there are men in South Africa representing the two branches of the Canadian family, fighting side by side for the honor of Canada. Already some of them have fallen, giving to the country the last full measure of devotion. Their remains have been laid in the same grave, there to remain to the end of time in that last fraternal embrace. Can we not hope, I ask my hon. friend himself, that in that grave shall be buried the last vestiges of our former antagonism. If such shall be the result, if we can indulge that hope, if we can believe that in that grave shall be buried contentions, the sending of the contingent would be the greater service ever rendered to Canada since Confederation.

When Sir Charles Tupper a few days ago moved his amendment to the Redistribution Bill he could not have thought it would be accepted by the House of Commons or the Country. It was a very transparent device, for it proposed to place the readjustment of the constituencies in the hands of the judges after the census next year, whereas the purpose of the Government is to meet an immediate need, and place the constituencies on a fair basis before the next general election. The principle of placing the defining of Parliamentary constituencies in the hands of the judges was strongly advocated by the Liberal party both in 1832 and 1892, but the then Conservative Government would have none of it. Every person who has taken the trouble to inform himself in the matter knows that the constituencies as they exist at present were created from a partisan standpoint, and are most unjust to the Liberal party. The bill proposed by the present Government is fair to both parties, therefore the time to pass it is, not after the next General Election, but now. Nothing can stifle the wish of the House and the Country but the Dominion Senate.

The Toronto World is booming Ireland and the Irish people for all it is worth these days. On Saturday an article on its front page was headed by the words, "There's nothing to good for the Irish," in large display letters, and on Tuesday that paper contained an editorial favoring Home Rule for the Emerald Isle. The editorial contained the following sentences:—"As Canadians view federation there is no reason why Ireland should not have the management of her own local affairs. Home Rule up to a certain point would not be objectionable. On the contrary, it might remove the cause of the ill feeling that has existed between the two peoples for so many years. Ireland as an integral part of the British Empire, composed of Great Britain, Canada, Australia, India and South Africa might become a different country from Ireland as a part of the United Kingdom" &c.

The last vestige of prejudice against the wearing of the Shamrock must have been obliterated last week when Queen Victoria ordered the soldiers to wear that national emblem in honor of the Irish nation, on account of the bravery of the Irish troops who took a foremost part in the defence of Ladysmith during the long siege. It is needless to say the suggestion of Her Majesty was acted upon, for news comes from all parts of the British Empire that on Saturday last, St. Patrick's Day, the shamrock was worn by all classes of people, and the green flag floated over parliamentary buildings and municipal buildings as well as from many private residences throughout the land. There are Irish agitators who seem to take a delight in twisting the lion's tail, but as a nation Ireland is always ready to show her loyalty to the British Empire when the latter is threatened by her foreign foes.

The Committee Should Decide.

To The Editor of THE LIBERAL:

DEAR SIR,—From reports around the town it would seem that the Village Council has assumed responsibilities which, as a body, in my opinion, they have nothing to do with.

It is well known that a committee were the promoters of an effort to raise money for the Patriotic Fund. That body had officers of its own, was fully organized, and carried out their object to a successful issue.

Now, sir, as one of the committee I claim I have a voice as to where the money should be placed, and there are others of the committee that have the same opinion, and I know that there was an understanding at one of the meetings that the money should be placed direct in the hands of the Government at Ottawa. I should like to know why another body of men, who were conspicuous by their absence at committee meetings, and never put in an appearance at all when the preparations were being made, should now presume to say where and how the money should be placed? "Honor to whom honor is due."

Yours,
J. H. SANDERSON,
Richmond Hill, March 21, 1900.

"Soldiers and Civil Power."

To the Editor of THE LIBERAL:

STR,—In The Globe of the 20th March I read a lecture in the Armories in Toronto on "Aid to the Civil Power," in which occurs the following: "Neither under the common law nor under any statute of the United Kingdom were regulars or volunteers compelled, as such, to assist the civil power."

I find in "The Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army," that provision is made for such aid, pointing out the "Duties in Aid of the Civil Power," these regulations have the force of law in the United Kingdom.

Yours, &c.,
X.

On Friday evening the sixteenth, Mr. Ralph Wellman drove a sleigh-load of boys and girls to Mr. Ed. Forester's, Gormley. After playing many games they pulled taffy until about 11 o'clock when Mrs. Lawson furnished them with refreshments. The party then divided into two divisions and played many games until the "wee small hours" of the morning when they assembled themselves in the parlor where they gave three hearty cheers for Ed. to cheer him on his way to the North-West, and sang the National Anthem. When they had all bidden the host good-bye they departed to their many homes remembering the pleasant time they had spent.

We regret to have to record the sudden death of our young citizen, Fred Pattenden of Gormley, after an attack of pneumonia which lasted only two days. He died on Wednesday evening of last week and was buried at the Tunker burying-ground on Saturday.
