To the Editor of THE LIBERAL

What a monotonous world this would be if its people were not allowed to laugh. Of all God's great creation man is the only animal that the Divine Creator has made to laugh. Carlyle says, "Beware of the man that never laughs. He is only fit for schemes, stratagems and spoils." Man laughs in dimpled childhood, he joins in the hilarity of later years, and he chuckles when again a child over the ludicrous incidents of the long gone they flit across the memory. In these times of wonderful change for the better, these days of rapid adtemperance principles, we can afford to look back upon the past and smile Newmarket at the eccentricities of those who have helped to make up their share of the more humorous portion of the chronicles of our village. In this history repeats itself, for as we laugh over the primitive and somewhat uncouth do-TORONTO OFFICE: No. 1, Adelaide ings of former years, so those of the middle of the century on which we are about to enter will smile, perhaps audibly, at what we in our wisdom call "advanced civilization," as the crude notions of a couple of generations before. In these later years our village has been greatly improved in its religious and moral aspects. There are so many ways to which the time and attention of our people can be directed to assist in enabling us to make our existence pleasant and our lives profitable that we can dwell with some degree of amusement on the escapades of those who, in former years, had to confine themselves to narrower limits of enjoyment, to cruder and perhaps ougher methods of obtaining it. The retrospection should make us thankful for the opportunities of the present day and for the wisdom of later years, Like other villages and towns of less and perhaps of greater aspirations, we have had our regular announcements of Births, Marriages and Deaths, or as the Editor of a rural paper once headed his obituary column, Hatches, Matches and Despatch-

The Dr. overheard the remark and as quick as a flash retorted, "Well, if I do live in a dark and benighted part of the country I am indebted to your farthing candle for it." It was well known that the editor took a laudable and a well grounded pride in the makeup of the Guardian. The laugh caused by the keen thrust somewhat disconcerted the literary gentleman's equilib-
