SIR WILFRID AND THE EMPIRE.

A good-sized volume might be compiled of the newspaper and platform comments that have been made throughout the civilized world, upon that historical speech by Sir Wilfrid Laurier upon the Bourassa resolution some three weeks ago. It is no exaggeration to state that not for many years has any statesman in the empire created such an impression as was produced by that one half hour effort.

Such a compilation of comment and criticism would make exceedingly interesting reading. Here is a brief clipping from the Catholic Register, for example, which should be perused by everybody regardless of personal predilections. "It would seem" says the writer "as if Sir Wilfrid had reserved all his latent force for the supreme moment which Mr. Bourassa's amendment led to, and the manner in which he discharged the double duty of defending his Government's course of action and of winning the House to practical unanimity, is the most powerful and eloquent eulogium that could have been pronounced upon his patriotic and convincing address. The Premier of Canada has passed through a trying time; much has been said and written that for the dignity of the country had better never have been published. The people whom he loves, and of whom he is the foremost representative, had been traduced and goaded to the verge of rupture; he himself had been the butt of every so-called loyalist who thought his pen sharp enough to indite a venomous squib on the ragged lines of disloyalty. Like the large loyal-hearted man that he is, and as now he is universally admitted to be, he bore all with fortitude and manly forbearance; he bided his time and when it came, it did not find him wanting."

The debate upon the budget has made considerable progress in the House of Commons during the past week, and several important speeches on each side have been contributed. The principal result of the debate so far has been to draw the lines of demarcation very clearly between the trade policies and the two political parties. The Government's policy is clearly defined as:—a revenue tariff secured in part by a substantial preferential reduction upon British imports, whereby its promises of reduced taxation are fully redeemed and inter-imperial trade encouraged and developed. The Opposition policy is to give no concession to Great Britain unless an equal concession is made to Canada in return. This has been very properly called "The Pound of Flesh Policy." It is an exemplification of the principle enunciated twenty years ago, "If British connection is imperilled by the trade policy known as the N. P.; so much the worse for British connection."

Mayor Macdonald of Toronto, at the desire of a large number of the citizens, has written a letter to the Hon. David Mills, Minister of Justice, asking that the execution of Williams, the murderer of Varcoe, a Toronto Grocer, be postponed from Friday next (Good Friday) to some more appropriate day. The Mayor and his supporters certainly show a proper consideration for consistency under the circumstances. Where is our Christianity seen if on a day set apart by all our Christian churches for fasting, humiliation and prayer on account of our manifold transgressions, when the heads of our whole Dominion are supposed to be bowed in supplication at the throne of God for the forgiveness of our sins, if in Toronto, a city of churches, some of its citizens in accordance with law should be engaged in ushering a fellow sinner into an awful eternity.

The Other Letter Wanted.

To The Editor of THE LIBERAL:

SIR,—I was sorry to observe from his letter in your last issue that Reeve Savage felt hurt because I asked the week before if any action had been taken by the council in reference to Mr. Patterson's proposition to open a shoe factory in Richmond Hill, on certain conditions. The offer made by Mr. Patterson was pretty well understood by our citizens, but I was anxious to know what reply had been sent from this village. Our worthy reeve says he sent a reply, but instead of giving it he printed Mr. Patterson's letter. As a ratepayer I thought, and think still, that we should know what reply was sent from the village. No doubt Mr. Savage would keep a copy of the letter sent, and if he will publish it, the citizens will know all about it. Possibly he will do this after consideration. He says he did not consider my letter worthy of an answer because I did not sign my name, but he afterwards changed his mind. Surely it is not a crime to ask information on any question relating to the affairs of the village.

The reeve says he thinks I am the man who wanted to "bonus the village for $6,000" last year. This is a mistake. I am not anxious to give bonuses, but when an offer is made I think the citizens should be called together and consider the proposition. Newmarket and other places are always on the lookout for new industries. Let us also keep our eyes open. Those who believe in free discussion are not necessarily enemies of our village.
