Through Storm and Sunshine

young girl. I was in love with you secure." -I promised to marry you. All that I admit. But Sir Arthur came in my | rage. way. What girl of sense would have was doing a most sensible thing when py." I married him."

The Frenchman's face grew paler as he listened to the light, mocking tion," she said, "this is a matter of voice.

"Then I met you again in Paris, of a friend." when I had been some little time a widow, and I renewed my promise to marry you. That was rash, I knew it. I determined that I would see what you were like before I married you. I have tested you, and you have failed. I thought the wisest thing that I could do would be to invite you over to Lancewood. But this is such a curious country. I decided it was better that you should come in some business capacity. I have watched you closely since you have been here, and now I decline the alliance-I will not marry you."

"You forget," he hissed, "that you are in my power."

hard. I will give you a very handto France; but I shall not accompany | story." you, monsieur."

"Will you at least tell me why?" he asked, with a curious whiteness coming over his face.

tion," replied Lady Neslie. "You were faint ticking of the watch. young when I first knew you. You, Nouchet."

but "miladi," interrupted him.

said, "but that such a marvel as your | giving up gambling could ever take place, I refuse to believe. Years ago," forfeit these things for you."

"You would not forfeit them," he penniless, by Monsieur de Nouchet."

"I wish," said Miss Neslie, "that this unseemly dispute I have nothing Lady Neslie." whatever to do."

"Nay," said he. "I entreat you to | you," she replied. to bay. You promised to marry me, and you have refused. I have you in my power. I tell you that unless you consent, I will betray you to Miss Neslie."

"A betrayer is always a coward." the observed.

"Then I will be a coward. I will bell her all. And then, presumptuous as you are, you will not dare to remain here."

"I shall remain here," said "miladi." "You betraying me is a matter you have ever made, Vivien; but real-

"I repeat that I was a foolish of little moment now. My fortune is

His face grew frightful in its livid

"I will tell all I know of you," he hesitated between a handsome penni- said, "unless you consent. Think you less lieutenant, and a rich, English again, Valerie-you shall have a gay, baronet? Love-bah! It pales before sunny, bright 'ife in Paris. You know money. You owned yourself that I I love you, and will make you hap-

"Miladi" shrugged her shoulders. "We will leave love out of the quesfunds for gambling, and the betrayal

"I have more patience with you," he hissed between his white lips, "than I thought I could have with any woman living."

"It is all of no use," said Lady Neslie, "Words are vain; threats, persuasions, are vain. I will not marry you. You want to marry me because you want my fortune to gamble with; you shall not have it. I would rather gamble it all away myself than give it to you."

and laid it on the table between them.

"I give you just five minutes in which to reconsider your words. Lady child I madly loved her fair, laughing or no relief, until he began the use of "I am indifferent. I will not be Neslie if you promise to marry me, you shall never regret it; if you some present and you shall return refuse. I will tell Miss Neslie your wishes of her parents she left it, and ladi," laughing. "I am tired-I cannot stand for five minutes longer." "Yes, I have not the least objec- stood in silence, unbroken save by the is and promised-ah, madman that I had no decided faults. Now you are Outside a bright moon was shining, a little money. She took her only sisa confirmed gambler. You could no the dew lay on the sleeping flowers, ter, Marie, as her maid, and traveled more keep from the gaming-table than | the tall trees stood like huge senti- abroad. She afterward returned to a you could live without air. That is nels; inside the soft pearly light of Parisian boarding-house, and there why I decline to marry you, Henri de | the lamp filled the room, with a warm | met your father-Sir Arthur." glow, and shone upon the three els seeming to attract all the light, chet. her mouth curled in scorn, her eyes have thought so much of this, but | vet dress sweeping the ground, her | deceived him; I never knew how. white lips and burning eyes.

over?

had never seen anything so terrible as his handsome, haggard, livid face.

"You refuse; then I will keep my word. I pray you to listen, Miss Neslie, while / I tell you Lady Neslie's

"I would rather not hear it. It comes too late," said Vivien, earnestly. "Lady Valerie, is one of us now; if there are any secrets in her past life, let them lie buried."

"That is the most sensible speech ly I do not mind-it can make no difference to me. Before Sir Arthur's death, I persuaded, coaxed, conciliated; but now I am quite indifferentnothing can touch my fortune. As for my position, we shall see what harm monsieur can do me."

"Valerie," he cried once more, "will | should have been more on the alert," you retract ?"

She looked at him with burning

"After you have threatened me! Coward, betrayer, I would not marry you to save my life!"

He turned to Vivien.

This woman who mocks me so cruelly now was my first love. She was not Valerie D'Este, as she told your father, but Valerie Roilleux, the daughter of a grocer in Paris."

"Miladi" interrupted him with a little laugh.

"Miss Neslie will not be surprised to hear that. She never believed that I was a D'Este-did you, Vivien?"

The haughty disdain of the beautiful face was her only answer. Monsieur continued-

"Valerie was always pretty; her sister Marie, who passes here as her maid, always plain. I need not weary you, Miss Neslie, by telling you of the content her; against the prayers, the when she was only fourteen she was "Pray give me a chair," said. "mi- known as the most daring rider in the most fashionable cirque in Paris. She traveled half over France with But he did not stir, and the others | that circus, and then returned to Parwas to believe her !-- to marry me. Her The scene was intensely dramatic. parents were dead then, and she had Vivien interrupted him. She did not "If I give my word," he began; faces. Never was there a more strik- look at the fair, false woman who ing group-"miladi," lovely, laugh- had blighted her life, but the dark, "There are marvels in nature," she ing, mocking, her gay dress and jew- earnest eyes were fixed on de Nou-

"If you do not mind," she said, flashing defiance, yet gay and reck- "will you will me, how she duped my she continued earnestly, "I should not less; Vivien, with her picturesque vel- father? I always knew that she had

I have learned the value of money. grandly-beautiful face filled with no- "Yes, I will tell you. When she I know the value of a good home, a ble disdain, tall, imperial, queenly; found from the mistress of the house substantial fortune, and I shall not the Frenchman agitated, pale with that a rich English baronet was staying there, she at once made up her Never a word was spoken. "Miladi" mind. She caused herself to be insaid. "Miladi," waved her white hand. stirred the air with her fan. Vivien's troduced to him as Mademoiselle D'-"I should. If I married you to- heart beat loud and fast; it seemed Este, a daughter of one of the youngmorrow, you would spend my whole to her that she stood there holding er branches of the D'Estes. She told fortune, and when it was spent you | the honor of her house in her hand. | him a sad little story about limited would be the first to ill use me. I How slowly the minutes passed! What means, and the painful position of decline the honor of being rendered had she to hear when they were an orphan girl. Sir Arthur, your father, permit me to say, Miss Neslie, "Now," said M. de Nouchet, "the was not very shrewd. She was very you would permit me to pass; with time is past; give me your answer, quick, very cunning; she was very fair and very charming. She had the "I refuse most absolutely to marry face of an angel, the voice of a siren; he was indolent and liked to be amusremain. My lady, you have driven me He bowed, and Vivien thought she ed-she amused him. He did not take the trouble to inquire into her antecedents. He took all she said for granted, fell in love with and married her."

"But you, monsieur-what did you do?" asked Vivien. It annoyed her that her father should have been so easily duped-her poor, dead father!

"What did I do, Miss Neslie? had to submit. What could I do? When she told me of her resolve to marry a rich baronet, I knew that all I could say would be vain. I will not grieve you by repeating what she promised. As to one thing she kept her word. After she was married she sent me continually handsome sums of money. She has been ungrudgingly generous to me."

"And you took it?" said Vivien. "Yes; I took it. It was the price of "miladi's secret. I professed to believe her a D'Este. I said no word about her being a strolling player." Miss Neslie held up her hands with fit by my experience." an exclamation of horror.

"Hush!" she said. "Your words are terrible."

strolling player. I kept her secretshe paid me to do so. I read the notice of your father's death in the English papers, Miss Neslie, and then I wrote to her, reminding her of her promise. It was for that reason she she is there-ask her whether every word I have said is not true." ladi," with careless, airy grace. "I do to yourself than to me." Then, turnnot deny it. Every word is true, ing, from Miss Neslie, she looked at er-they produced no effect on Lady Neslie.

What then ?"

"What then?" she repeated. was Sir Arthur's lawful wife-legally married to him."

"You deceived him," said Vivien.

"So much the worse for him. He she observed. "I admit it all. I do not mind in the least about the expossure. I only cared to keep my affairs secret during Sir Arthur's life. Of course an exposure then would have been very awkward for me. He might have tried for a divorce, though "Miss Neslie," he said, "listen to me. I cannot see on what grounds. He would certainly have altered his will and left me penniless. Now that he

RESULTING FROM SCIATICA IN AN AGGRAVATED FORM.

Many Nights the Sufferer Could Not Lie in Bed, and His Leg Was Frequently Swollen to Twice Its Natural Size.

From the Journal, St. Catharines. Mr. John T. Benson, stationary engineer at the Ridley College, St. Catharines, is known by most of the He drew his watch from his pocket | quiet home, where this cold, cruel wo- residents of the city. For years Mr. fman lived, or of her vanity, greater Benson suffered acute agony from even than her beauty. I was the son sciatica, and notwithstanding numof a notary living near, and as a erous forms of treatment, found little face. The quiet home did not long Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills speedily restored his health, as they have done that of thousands of others who have given them a fair trial. To the reporter who interviewed him, Mr. Benson said :- "I able. I would not condescend to ask certainly owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they have released me from a form of tor- amount on condition that you tell to ture that had afflicted me almost continuously for twenty years. The pain began in my back, then she added, "not in the least from shifted to my hip, and thence down any motive of compassion for you, my leg. It became so severe that it but to save the honor of the Nesseemed as though the very marrow in my bones was being scalded, and at times I could scarcely repress crying aloud from the agony I endured. I tried all sorts of liniments and lotions, but got no relief. I doctored at the head of her table and dispenses with several physicians, even going hospitality, and these are the delicate to Buffalo for treatment by a special- items in her bill of fare. They were ist there, but in no case did I ever re- tested at first hand by W. H. Gilder ceive more than temporary relief. It may be easily imagined that the pain I endured told upon me in other ways what grace he might. and I became almost a physical wreck. At times my right leg would swell to nearly twice its normal size. Then the pain and swelling would shift to my left leg, and the agony was something awful. I suppose that during the period I was afflicted I have hundreds of times laid on my back on the floor with my foot and leg elevated on a chair in order to obtain slight ease from the pain I endured. The muscles and sinews in my legs looked as though they had twisted and tied in knots. The trou-> permanent. I may also add that my wife has used the pills for indigestion, headaches and dizziness, and has found great benefit from them. Words cannot express the great benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, ly discussed, there comes a large piece and I hope similar sufferers will pro-ble went on in this way until finally nothing but opiates would deaden the pain. A few years ago I read of a cure in a similar case through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. For some time after I began their use, I could not seet hat they were helping me, but I decided that I would give them a fair trial. By the time I had used a half dozen boxes, there was a decided improvement in my case, and I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, when I felt my cure was complete. Several years return of the trouble, so that I feel safe in saying that the cure has been

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of of the disease. They an inch thick and very tough, so that renew and build up the blood, and "They are true," he declared. "She strengthen the nerves, thus driving It is therefore cut into very small was neither more nor less than a disease from the system. If your dealer does not keep them, they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box. or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

came to Paris, and no other. You is dead and my fortune secure, I am know what followed. She promised to | indifferent. You may have the story marry me as soon as etiquette would printed, Vivien," she added, "if you permit, and in the meantime she in- like; it will be a finishing touch to the vited me to the Abbey. Miss Neslie, honor of the Neslies-a strolling player, a grocer's daughter, mistress of Lancewood! It seems to me that in "There is no need to ask," said "mi- telling it you will bring more shame Henri de Nouchet. "As for you," she The proud indignation of the noble said, "traitor, coward, trader on a face, the measureless contempt in the woman's secrets, go! Never while I dark eyes, would have silenced anoth- live will I look upon your face again THE INFUSION OF never will I address another word to you. Go from my presence, and take with you my contempt. You have done your worst. Do what you will, your power over me is ended; the strolling player,' the grocer's daughter, has the honor of wishing Monsieur de Nouchet a lasting adieu." With a smile parting the crimson lips, showing the pearly teeth and the pretty dimples in the white chin, with the light gleaming in her jewels, with an easy, careless grace all her own. " miladi " swept from the room, while the Frenchman looked after her with 1 curse.

CEYLON GREEN TEA . is superior to that of the finest Japan tea grown.

"She has ruined my life. I have spent it as I should never have spent it but for her," he said. And so ghastly, so terrible was the despair on his face that Vivien almost pitied him. "What money do you want?" asked Vivien, curtly. "Enough to take up my bills; I have some due now."

He seemed to shrink from the clear. bright glance of her dark eyes.

"Monsieur de Nouchet," said Miss Neslie. "I think you are a man utterly without principle. You have traded on a woman's secrets, you have been deceitful, mean and dishonora favor from you, but I will purchase one. Write down for me all the money you owe. I will give you the no other person what you have told to me, and that you never mention Lady Neslie's name again. This I do."

To Be Continued.

ARCTIC DELICACIES

This is the way an Eskimo lady sits when, in crossing Siberia at the north, he had to accept native customs with

No matter how early you may awaken in the morning, you will always find the mistress of the house already up; that is, her position has changed from reclining to sitting. But as soon as she observes that you are awake, she hands you a small piece of meat to steady your nerves until breakfast.

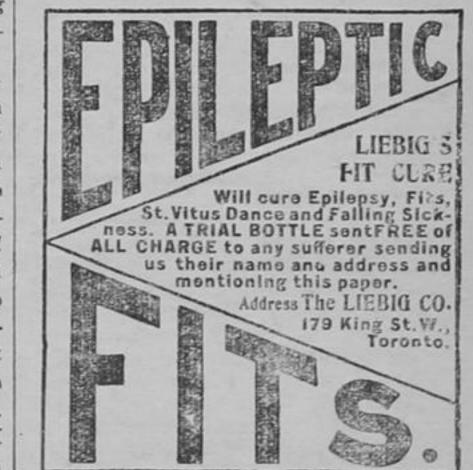

Then she goes into the next apartment, which is merely an enclosure for keeping the dogs away from the stores, and after fifteen minutes of gounding and chopping, returns with the breakfast.

A large, flat wooden tray is placed on the floor, and the landlady takes her position at one end, in the attitude elegantly described as squatting. The family and their guests gather around the board on either side, lying flat on their storach with their head toward the breakfast and their feet

The first course is some frozen weeds, mixed with seal oil and eaten with small portions of fresh blubber. which the lady of the house cuts with a large chopping-knife.

The next course is walrus meat. This have since passed and I have had no is also out up by the presiding lady, and is served with no stinting hand. At this portion of the meal, the one who can swallow the largest piece without chewing has the advantage. and the only way to get even with him is to keep one piece in your mouth and two in your hand.

After this joint has been thoroughof walrus hide, which has a small portion of blubber attached to it, and the hair still on the outside. It is about it is impossible to affect it by chewing. pieces by the hostess, and finishes the meal. Really it is the most palatable dish of all.

A Medicine of High Repute.

A Special Formula of a Creat Physician is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food-The Great Blood Builder.

There are imitators of Dr. A. W. ed leader among the Lady Maccabees, Chase, but none who dare to reproduce his portrait and signature, which are found on every box of his gen- social qualities. Mrs. Young has renine remedies.

can duplicate the marvellous cures brought about by this great physician of recipe book fame. Here is a sample nection with several fraternal socieof the letters daily received from ties had drawn so much upon my grateful cured ones :-

at Clarenceville, Que., writes:-" For had no appetite, could get no real with nervous debility. I suffered much much with pains in the head and and consulted doctors, and used med- back. I tried many sorts of tonics, Icines in vain. Some months ago I but could get no permanent help unheard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, used til I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I two boxes, and my health improved so took two boxes as directed and found avenue, Jackson, Mich., is a recogniz- son, Bates, & Co., Toronto.

Food I could feel my system being know of."

Foresters and other fraternal societies, and is we'll known throughout the State for her executive ability and cently recovered from nervous disor-Nor are there any preparations that ders, which she describes in the following words:-

"My social and other duties in constrength that I found myself all run Mr. A. T. P. Lalame, railway agent down in health. I was very nervous twelve years I have been run down rest from sleep and was troubled very rapidly that I ordered twelve more. | a perfect cure for my trouble. Their "I can say frenkly that this treat- action was very mild and effective, ment has no equal in the medical and I believe bem to be the best world. While using Dr. Chase's Nerve | medicine for nervous troubles that I built up until now I am strong and Insist on having the genuine and healthy. I cannot recommend it too you can be absolutely sure of great bighly, for weak, nervous people." | benefit. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 Mrs. E. H. Young, of 214 Greenwood cents a box, at all dealers, or Edman-