RICHMOND HILL, June 14, 1900
A Trip to Ohio.

On Monday, May 13, Eld. Baker, Mr. A. Heise of Gormley, and myself, boarded the 7 a. m. car here en route for Pennelsville, Ohio, where our general conference convened. At Toronto we took the Wabash to Buffalo. As our train rushed across the Niagara Peninsula, with its peach orchards pink with blossom, its comfortable homes and trim farm buildings, I felt proud of our fair Province of Ontario. Arriving at Buffalo we met the rest of the Canadian delegation, who, with a few others, swelled our number to fourteen. Here we took the Lake Shore R. R. to Cleveland, and from there to Springfield the "Big Four" R. R. Our train, by some mistake in arrangements, was of that annoying kind that stops at all stations and runs slow between them. "All things come to those who wait," for at 4.30 Tuesday morning we pulled into Springfield. Here we waited three hours for the trolley to Pennelsville, six miles further, where we found conveyances to take us to the church and town, a mile away.

I will pass over the conference with this remark that it was a large representative gathering, where peace and unity prevailed. Not a single detail was overlooked by our western friends that could add to our comfort or convenience. From Tuesday morning till Monday morning the tables in the basement were spread three times a day for all present without any charge. The Americans are very fond of coffee, of powerful calibre. Tea finds little favor, and is seldom met with. A few rods from the church an enterprising fellow set up a booth for the sale of soft drinks, cigars, oranges, etc. On Sunday morning a second man arrived with a wagon and set out his wares. All the Sabbath day, till the close of the evening service, they plied their business. I am pleased to add, these gentlemen were entirely ignored by the church people, who would gladly have prevented it, but the law allows in on the highway.

On Monday, May 21, we bade farewell to the rest of our party, and while they sped homeward we (Eld. Baker and myself) took trolley for Drayton, 18 miles west, the single fare 35 cents, fine cushioned seats holding two, with aisle down centre. This road runs partly across country and partly on the road, for every mile of which it pays an annual rental of $25, the inside of ties not to come nearer to the centre of the road than 16 feet.

Drayton is a fine town of about 150,000 population, modernly built and laid out with wide clean streets, with pavements like Jarvis street. Ten costly iron bridges, some of them 1,000 feet long and 60 high, span these turbulent streams. While here we visited the National Cash Register factory. This is claimed to be the model factory of the world; $5,000,000 capital, 2,050 employes, 123 acres floor space. This firm has adopted the "Golden Rule" in its treatment of employes, and it has proved eminently successful. The greatest of all sights in Drayton is the National Soldiers' Home. In fact it is a town by itself, being outside of the city limits. Here 5,000 old soldiers of the Civil War are spending their declining years in ease and comfort. Beautiful grounds covering about 1,000 acres, shady parks with snug seats here and there, artificial lakes of pure water full of fine fish, which they can catch to their heart's content. Grottoes in the rocky bank with pure spring water flowing forth, refresh the thirsty visitor. There are lofty green-houses with immense specimens of all kinds of tropical plants and flowers of every hue, in beds of all sorts of fantastic designs, ornament the lawn. But the aged veterans need more than beautiful scenery, and in the more practical matter of satisfying the inner man, our Uncle Sam deserves unstinted praise. Five thousand pounds of meat a day is the regular thing, while vegetables, fish, cakes, pies and fruit in quantities that stagger an ordinary mortal, are freely supplied. The head cook remarked to me, "We have a rich boss." The youngest veterans are 65 year old, and deaths average about three a day. Two churches, Catholic and Protestant, provide for their spiritual welfare. In summer services are held in the park daily. Hearing a stentorian voice in the distance myself and Rev. H. Trump of Rols, Ill., followed it and soon found ourselves in a shady grove, well seated, listening to an earnest appeal from an old Colonel. An old fashioned fellowship meeting followed, during which the leader called on myself and friend to address them. When I told them I was from Canada and hoped that fact would be no disadvantage, they exclaimed No! No! Go on! Go on! At the close I was warmly welcomed by quite a number, some of whom were Canadians from this country.

These notes however are getting too long, so to be brief, after driving across two counties and visiting many kind friends as we went, we took train on Monday, May 28, for home. We travelled many miles at the rate of 70 miles an hour, and in due time arrived safely home again, with the same impression as on previous trips, that Markham is hard to beat for farming or anything else.

Bond's Lake promises to be a favorite resort for pleasure seekers this summer. The Metropolitan Railway Company have graded the roadway leading to the picnic grounds from Yonge Street, on the north side of the lake and a mammoth pavilion will soon be in the course of erection. Mr. Joseph Morton is setting a good example to his neighbors by sodding his lawn and terracing the slope in front of his residence. Mr. Marr who had been engineer at the Power House for some time past removed with his family to Toronto last week.
