MANUAL TRAINING.

The movement to introduce manual training into the Public Schools in each of the Provinces of Canada, under the Macdonald-Sloyd School Fund, has been most successful so far as it has gone. The school at Fredericton, N. B., was opened in April and continued until the end of June, and has been most highly spoken of by the educational authorities of New Brunswick as well as by the parents and pupils themselves. In order that teachers in the Maritime Provinces may have an opportunity of seeing for themselves the nature of this instruction, and in some cases of preparing themselves to take it up in their schools, Pro. Robertson has decided to provide a summer course for teachers at Fredericton. The instruction will be free, and both men and women teachers will be accepted. The course will begin on July 16, and last six weeks. After the summer holidays manual training courses are to be provided under the Macdonald-Sloyd School Fund at Truro, N. S., and at Charlottetown, P. E. I.

THE NEW PREFERENTIAL.

With the beginning of this week preferential tariff came into force, and all imports of English manufactured goods are now admitted into Canada at two-thirds of the duty charged upon the products of other countries. As a result of this latest reduction the summer shipments of British manufactures to the Canadian market have been larger than ever before, and without any exception, those in position to judge of the conditions appear to agree that this will be a permanent and growing effect of the Laurier policy of Imperial preference. There is a consensus of opinion that the preference would not only greatly increase importation from Great Britain, but would neutralize to the consumer, the effect of the recent advance in staple lines. One leading dry goods man states the situation concisely when he declared that but for the reduction there would be a considerable increase in the cost of leading staples, and some lines would probably not be imported at all but for the reduction in the tariff.

Across the Ocean.

Falls upon his ear and he comes to himself. As if in a dream he fancies he hears such heavenly music and listening still more closely he believes it is the sound of many waters, mighty and loud, and again, before he has time to breathe, it is a merry brook purling over pebbles and stones, until he thinks he has reached the seventh heaven of delight, and in an instant some hymn bursts upon the air and in the quietude of the noon-day hour, "Rock of Ages," or "Jesus Lover of my Soul," not only greets him, but calming perchance his troubled heart, he wends his way in thought to that most happy spot on earth, beloved by people of all climes, Home Sweet Home.

Returning to the church-yard we pass along a narrow path leading to the street and having a few minutes to spare we look around the town and take in the sights. I noticed the hunting-box of the Countess of Cardigan and had the pleasure of seeing her ladyship when at the "meet" some weeks ago.

We go to the Midland Railway station and call to see how the new bridge is progressing. You see I am interested in this new structure as my brother contracted for the brick-work. I am rather impressed with the peculiar shade of the bricks; they are blue instead of red, and are much stronger and nicer looking, finishing up better than the ordinary kind. Our way home lies through a charming part of the Midland Counties and we pass the country seat of the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, a very pretty and interesting spot, where they spend their days during the hunting season.

By the way I saw the "meet" and enjoyed the sight very much. Many ladies and gentlemen were there, with their fine horses, dogs and liveries, and having met at the inn they took to the woods, crossing fields and ditches, dashing through hedges and over fences after "Mr. Fox," who in a few minutes scampered over a plain followed closely by the dogs. After an exciting chase all returned from the day's sport with two foxes, which they considered a good catch.

In this district an ironstone mine forms quite an industry. The fields in which the stone is found form part of a valuable farm, and I was much interested in seeing the material loaded into trucks which run one car up and one down the line the same moment, bringing it to the station where it is taken to the furnaces, refined, melted, and moulded, and shipped to other parts of the world. At Grimstone I saw the remains of the "stocks." Such stocks I have no wish to share in, but doubtless many have been put in these stocks for beating their wives, disobeying the law, or for some other crime committed in olden times. There seemed to have been a place for the feet and hands, and its a pity England didn't abandon such cruelty years before she did.

At another bend of the road I saw a very high and slender stone and at its summit a cross was carved. No inscription marks this strange piece of work, and it looks as if the sculptor had gone to sleep and suddenly waking had carved the words "Who'd have thought it?" over a door on the opposite side of the way. "Market" used to be held here in olden times, and whether we like it or not, the fact remains that "crosses" are found the world over, only some people have more to bear than others.

DEAR SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to publicly thank the York Mutual Fire Insurance Company for their prompt and liberal settlement of my claim.  DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
 Dear Sirs:—A year ago I had a valuable horse which got lame. I took him to the Veterinary Surgeon who pronounced it curbs and gave me little hope, although he applied a sharp blister. This made matters only worse and the horse became so lame that it could not stand up. After trying everything in my power I went to a neighbor and told him about the case. He gave me one of your books and I studied it carefully and being resolved to do the utmost in favor of my beast, went to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of your Spavin Cure and applied it strictly according to directions. Before the first bottle was used I noticed an improvement, and when the seventh bottle was about half used, my horse was completely cured and without leaving a blemish on him. After ceasing treatment I gave the horse good care and did some light work with him, wishing to see if it had effected a cure. I then started to work the horse hard and to my entire satisfaction he never showed any more lameness through the whole summer. I can recommend Kendall's Spavin Cure not only as an excellent, but as a sure remedy, to any one that it may concern. Yours truly,
 S. J. LUEL TRITTEN.
