The Liberal.

RICHMOND HILL, September 20, 1900

EAST AND WEST YORK.

The coming contests in East and West York for seats in the House of Commons promise to be among the most interesting to be held. The present Members, Mr. W. F. Maclean and Hon. N. C. Wallace, are well known as strong men and clever campaigners, and will leave no stone unturned to again secure the positions they now hold. The Liberals, on the other hand, have two strong men in the field to oppose the present Members, and express confidence that they can redeem both ridings.

Mr. N. W. Rowell, who has been nominated in East York, although comparatively speaking a young man, has done effective work for a number of years on Liberal platforms and is one of the finest speakers in the province. The Liberals in selecting him, have made an excellent choice, and should he be elected to Parliament his eloquence will add greatly to the debating ability in the House. Mr. Arch. Campbell who has been nominated in West York is already well-known in Parliament, having ably represented West Kent during the past fourteen years without a break. His voice is often heard in Parliament, and he is a member of some of the most important committees in the House. He formerly owned large flour mills in the city of Chatham, but eight years ago he sold out and built in Toronto Junction where he is in close touch with many of the farmers in the southern portion of the riding. Mr. Campbell declined re-nomination in Kent, feeling that if elected in West York he could better represent the people among whom he resides, rather than those a couple of hundred miles away. The unanimous choice of last Saturday's convention is certainly the strongest man in the Liberal ranks in West York.

The action of a number of malcontents in Dawson City in presenting an address to the Governor-General setting forth all sorts of alleged grievances and outrages has been a god-send to those who are finding their Yukon scandals sensation petering out badly. It is scarcely necessary to examine the document very closely to estimate its value. The statement that "population had been driven from the Yukon" by harsh regulations, that the country was "on the verge of rebellion," and that the people had "suffered worse grievances than had the Uitlanders of the Transvaal," are fair samples of the general reliability of the "facts" set forth, and of the trustworthiness of the petitioners. Against this, however, it may not be out of place to quote the opinion of Father R. P. Gendreau, Apostolic Vicar in the Yukon, who has just come out. His testimony will surely be above suspicion. He says: "I am absolutely impartial as between the Government and the Opposition, but I can say this in defence of the Yukon, that I have read the complaints made in the House of Commons and in newspapers as to the administration of the Yukon, and fifteen-sixteenth are grossly exaggerated. It would be a miracle if there were no complaints, for it must be remembered that the Yukon is a new country, where everything has to be originated, and at a long distance from the seat of government, but no exception can be taken, and the Government seems anxious to consider all just complaints. Besides many complaints are made by American miners, and it is not prudent to take as gospel all that these people say."

The author of the "Public School History of Canada" states in his closing pages that over against the progress and development that the Dominion has made since Confederation, "must be placed the tendency of so many of our young men to leave Canada for a home in the United States, the increasing difficulty our farmers experience to make farming pay, and the want of a large foreign market for our manufacturers." While this was very true three or four years ago, it is very far from the truth to-day. Our young men are no longer leaving Canada to find homes in the United States, for the outlook here is as bright as can be found anywhere. Farmers are no longer experiencing a difficulty to make farming pay; the improved methods taught under Government supervision, and the improved facilities for marketing products—better transportation and lower rates—together with vastly increased markets, domestic and foreign, have made the outlook for the farmer very different from what it was half a decade ago; and much of this is directly attributable to the business methods of the present administration. Lastly our manufacturers are rapidly obtaining recognition in the markets of the world, thanks to the improved facilities offered by the present Government, while the general confidence and commercial stability which has been engendered by the common sense and consistent course pursued by the Government, has placed the Canadian manufacturers in a position to make the most of their opportunities. It is evident that our school books will soon need revising.

Hugh John Macdonald apparently imagines either that the people in the east take no interest in western politics, or that they have marvelously short memories. He has been holding up his hands in a paroxysm of holy horror over alleged irregularities in West Huron and Brockville, irregularities which the Opposition have failed to prove, though last year they spent $10,000 of the public money in a vain effort to ferrit out evidence. Hugh John appears to have forgotten his own election in Winnipeg in 1896, where, although 6,000 ballots would have been sufficient according to the regular practice, 10,000 were printed. At two o'clock in the afternoon, however, all the ballots had been used, and the polls had to be temporarily closed until more could be printed. The total vote polled for both candidates was 5,796. Upwards of 4,000 ballots which were not found in the ballot box when the votes were counted were used in the contest. These are facts proved under oath, and not costing $10,000 to discover either.

The Kincardine Review has the following paragraph relative to Mr. H. J. Macdonald's fitness for a Canadian statesman:—"Don't worry about Hugh John's cleverness, dear friends. Ask rather if he is honest and honorable in character; true and faithful to trust. That's what you want in a public man. Cleverness in a politician too often runs in the direction of trickery and treachery". An amiable disposition is certainly to be commended, but in the making of our laws men of intellect are not to be despised. It is folly to insinuate that men who have brains are necessarily scoundrels.

The average rate of increase in Canada's total trade from 1878 to 1896 was $3,700,000 per annum, the increase from 1896 to 1900, four years of Liberal administration, was at the rate of $25,000,000, or almost ten times greater. Moreover the rate is steadily increasing year by year, and there is every possible indication that a continuance of the present policy will mean a continuance of this splendid growth.
