SOME GREAT SMOKERS.

NUMBER OF FAMOUS PEOPLE WHO ENJOYED A SMOKE.

Charles Spurgeon Loved the Weed—King Edward Is a Great Smoker Likewise.

A devotion to the joys of nicotine would seem to be a distinguishing feature of many of the world's greatest men, if we may judge by the large number of famous people who have admitted their sincere attachment to the pleasures of the weed.

The late Charles Spurgeon was an enthusiastic smoker, and braved a considerable amount of popular disapproval rather than abandon his daily whiff. On one occasion he actually made a reference to his cigar-smoking habits in the course of a sermon, vindicating the absolute propriety of a minister of religion following this practice if he felt disposed.

H. M. the King is, and always has been, a devotee of the weed, and in this example he is followed by nearly all the Continental Sovereigns. President McKinley of the United

A COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER'S STORY

Interview with Mr. J. H. Ireland, one of the Old Time Knights of the Grip.

His Flight on a Recent Occasion in the Maritime Provinces—How Dodd's Kidney Pills Came to His Help—High Words of Praise for that Remedy.

Toronto, June 17, (Special).—Mr. J. H. Ireland, the well-known traveller for hats and caps, left for the Maritime Provinces one day last week. Handily packed in Mr. Ireland's private grip was a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the medicine famous throughout Canada as a specific for all troubles of the kidneys. When asked about his experience with this remedy Mr. Ireland grew quite enthusiastic.

"I never go out on a trip of any length without a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills," he asserted.

"Are you afflicted with kidney trouble a great deal then," Mr. Ireland was asked.

"Not a great deal now, no," replied Mr. Ireland. "I take Dodd's Kidney Pills more as a preventative than anything else. But in the winter of ninety-eight I was, I can tell you. I was down in Nova Scotia when I first used Dodd's Kidney Pills. I don't know whether it was the water down there, the climate, riding so much in the train or what, but certainly my kidneys were on the point of a complete break-down. Bachache! It was one continual misery. It spoiled my business, broke my rest and wore me down until the life was taken right out of me."

"And you used Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

"I used the only remedy I knew of that was a specific for the kidneys," answered Mr. Ireland. "The first dose of Dodd's Kidney Pills seemed to go right to the spot. In a few days I was feeling as well as ever I did in my life. They are a splendid medicine. I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to scores of men on the road like myself and none of them but have the warmest praise for the medicine being just exactly what we need in our walk of life, a safe reliable strengthening stimulant for the kidneys."

States is said to be one of the best judges of cigars in the Union, though he does not indulge in smoking to any great extent.

The famous writer, Thomas Carlyle, was rarely seen without a clay pipe between his teeth, and one of his most famous literary panegyrics is devoted to the delights of "Lady Nicotine." Victor Hugo was also a passionate lover of tobacco, and paid fabulous prices for his cigars.

Guizot, the French historian, considered that it was tobacco which lengthened his life to an inordinate degree; whilst Charles Kingsley, the immortal author of "Westward Ho!" was unable to compose a single line of his brilliant work until a cigar was firmly set.

BETWEEN HIS LIPS. Robert Burns was a persistent smoker, and would sometimes consume 1 lb. of tobacco per week.

The late Lord Tennyson, when being asked how he liked a continental tour, confessed that he had disliked Venice because "they had no good cigars in the town," but towards the latter portion of his career the Laureate abandoned cigars in favor of clay pipes, made especially for his own use.

Prince Bismarck was an inveterate cigar-smoker, but that his good-heartedness could triumph over his love of the weed was proved during the Franco-German campaign, when he resigned a cigar which he had been treasuring for use after the battle to a wounded soldier who cast longing eyes at the precious weed. His great contemporary, General Moltke, was equally devoted to smoking joys, and was rarely seen without a huge cigar between his firm lips.

Professor Huxley stated in the course of a lecture that he considered tobacco "a sweetener and equalizer of the temper," and he supported his theory by consuming vast quantities of the same on all occasions. Charles Lamb, the delightful essayist, held a similar opinion, and he was once heard to express the wish that "his last breath might be drawn through a pipe and exhaled in a pun."

Both Charles Dickens and William Thackeray loved a good cigar, though curiously enough the former rarely refers to the smoking habit in his fictions with any degree of enthusiasm; but Lord Lytton, the famous contemporary of the two aforesaid writers, not only revelled in the making of smoke, but glorified the process in various portions of

HIS VOLUMINOUS WORKS.

Thomas Alva Edison smokes, to use a popular simile, "like a funnel," and has often been known to consume a dozen cigars in the course of a working day. When pondering the details of a novel invention he confesses that he is greatly aided in the process by the presence of a fragrant weed, and there are few brain-workers who do not find their wits stimulated by such extraneous aid.

On the other hand, there are many famous people who view all forms of tobacco with undeniable aversion. Napoleon the Great was one of this class, and after making a heroic attempt to smoke a pipe in his early manhood, he abandoned the business with alacrity and never smoked again.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy hated nicotine with fervent hatred, and on being asked if tobacco injured the brain, replied testily that the question was a vain one, seeing that nobody possessed of brains would contemplate smoking for an instant. Equally Mr. Algernon Swinburne, the famous poet, is an enemy of the weed, and cannot remain in a room where the odor of tobacco has penetrated.

THE KING'S SIMPLICITY.

Likes Short Dinners and Not Over-Much Display.

It was to the Prince of Wales that modern society owes its happy loss of the sombre and dull dinner-party that used to be so prevalent. Though everyone disliked the long and wearisome feast, and felt excessively heavy and ill after it, yet no one had the courage to give it up, because it was supposed to be a sign of good breeding and high life generally. But the Prince had the fact made known that he detested parade of this kind, and would only endure a dinner of a few courses exquisitely cooked. Thus at all really smart parties now the menu is a short one, and the viands are not heavy but easily digestible.

Another of the King's fancies is a hatred of the long row of knives and forks some people like to place in front of each diner. He refuses to have the whole plate basket laid out on the table, and has a single fork and knife placed for his own use with each dish that is handed; a fashion that prevails also in the best hotels and restaurants.

ANTS STOP A TRAIN.

An extraordinary experience fell to the lot of a through train to Perth, which left Albany, West Australia. When travelling up an incline about 180 miles from Albany, between Wagin and Beverley, the wheels of the engine failed to grip the line, notwithstanding the customary application of sand, and the train was brought to a standstill. An investigation then revealed the fact that the metals for hundreds of yards were covered by millions upon millions of black ants. The tiny insects were evidently taking advantage of the smooth passage offered by the rails in an extensive trek in search of fresh fields and pastures new. The wheels of the engine crushed the ants, and thus greased the rails so that no purchase could be obtained. The sand put out from the engine failed to produce the usual result.

HALL & RUCKEL, Montreal.

Mme. Melba has been relating some of her amusing experiences during her artistic career. In regard to audiences she thinks the English the least, and the French the most, demonstrative. One of her quaintest experiences was in Russia, where a crowd of ladies waited for her at the stage door that she might sign some photographs. To her immense amusement no one had brought the wherewithal; but at last a gentleman obligingly lent a pencil, which was afterwards promptly broken up, and the fragments divided among the ladies!

The Bishop of London's salary is £10,000 a year, and the rates, taxes, insurance, and maintenance of his two large residences can scarcely be less than 15 per cent. on that sum, so that his income is at once reduced to £8,500. Few probably realize the expense of a Bishop in the first year. Fees, payments for the furniture of the palace, and a variety of other costs and charges leave a comparatively small margin for other expenses. The late Bishop Villiers was nearly ruined by what was deemed extraordinary good fortune.

PRICE OF COFFEE.

Dr. Johnston, a member of the Legislative Council of Jamaica, while lecturing in Manchester, England, surprised his audience, especially the lady members of it, by stating that coffee he had seen marked in shops at 35 cents per pound was purchased in Jamaica for 5 cents per pound. He attributed the enormous increase in the price of the article to the operations of combines and rings, which, he said, he would do his best to break down before he left England.
