CHEATING MINE HOST.

HOW SOME LICENSED VICTUALLERS ARE SWINDLED

Incidents Where the Unwary Proprietors Are Victimized by Imposters.

Quite recently a gentleman walked into the saloon bar of a large public-house in West Kensington, and asked for the landlord.

Now it so happens that the landlord is (unfortunately for himself) a most approachable person where a silk hat and a frock coat are concerned. In this case a message soon brought him to the counter. A mutual drink, and the stranger, whose manners and tone were beyond reproach, produced a card.

"Old friend of yours, isn't he? At least, he says he is."

Landlord looks at the card. "Bless me, yes! Known Jimmy for years! Friend of his is friend of mine!"

Stranger's satisfaction is evident, though not exuberant, and another mutual libation is made to the health of "Jimmy."

Stranger then intimates that "Jimmy" had implied that the landlord would oblige his friend, the stranger, should such an obligation ever be needed. Landlord professes warm desire to oblige stranger at any time and to any extent in his power, on "Jimmy's" recommendation. Stranger then explains that he is a commercial traveller on a large scale. He is just come to reside in the neighborhood, and having often at the end of the day as much as £150 or £200, he would be glad if the landlord would take charge of it for him till the following morning.

"Certainly! Certainly! Edie!"—to his daughter—"if this gentleman ever brings any money over night and I'm out, put it in the safe."

Another mutual drink—effusive thanks—and the stranger departs.

Next evening he brings £150, which is duly received and locked up in the safe. Next morning it is withdrawn, as per agreement, the transaction being repeated some three or four times.

Then £150 is deposited, the stranger mentioning on that occasion that he proposes visiting Tattersall's on the following morning with the object of buying a couple of horses. "Knowing," he says, "the landlord to be a good judge of cattle," he asks that individual to accompany him, and give him the benefit of his experience and knowledge. "Agreed!" and an appointment is made for outside Tattersall's.

Next morning the pair meet, and proceed to the sale. Before bidding, the stranger incidentally discovers that he has but £15 upon him. "Has the landlord his cheque-book with him?" he asks. "Would he write him a cheque for the £150 he holds in his safe?" "Of course he would." In less than five minutes the stranger has the other's cheque.

"Would the landlord watch the bidding for ten minutes, while a friend is seen across the way?" "He would."

Ten-fifteen—twenty minutes—half an hour—but no stranger.

Having some business of his own to attend to, the landlord, still faithful to "Jimmy's" recommendation, jumps into a cab for home. Arrived there his first inquiry is whether the stranger has been there.

"Yes," says his daughter, "he came about forty minutes ago, and received back the £150 he deposited with you last night."

At racing speed, Boniface makes for his bank. Too late—by half an hour! The cheque has been cashed, and the mackerel as well as the sprat, has been successfully landed.

Sometimes the bait is not a golden one.

The proprietor of a flourishing hotel at a certain flourishing watering place was a widower with two charming daughters. Both the young ladies were well educated, and would have done credit to any social position.

Anyway, the younger attracted the attention of a gentleman staying in the house, she also having no small liking that way.

By-and-by the father of the girl began to be uneasy, and, paying his guest a visit one morning in his room, asked him his intentions as towards his daughter.

It should be said that the guest had been staying at the hotel for over a month, and had not only promptly settled his bills, but appeared to have plenty of ready money.

This was the desired opportunity, and the explanation asked for was at once and readily given. This aristocratic admirer was, he said, a member of a well-known North-country family. He was not only in receipt of a good present income, but he would inherit a considerable fortune on the death of his mother, Lady Soforth. He showed the unsuspecting host letters from his mother, in reply to his. He was his own master, he averred, and no action of his could in any way invalidate his succession to the maternal thousands.

All he asked was that no communication should be made to his friends by his fiancée's relatives, for at least a week; as by then his plans for making things smooth at home would be completely developed.

The young fellow was so frank, so good-looking, and, above all, so perfectly like to his own description of himself, that father, daughter, everybody believed in him, and would have trusted him to the full extent of their individual pockets and good opinions.

The day after the paternal inquisition, the Hon. Mr. Didem went up to London, returning in the evening to late dinner, and bringing with him a wonderful ring of opals and diamonds for his sweetheart.

On the third day a letter having come for him by the first post, he asked to receive the proprietor. Producing out of the recently delivered envelope a letter with an inclosed cheque for £250, he made request for his host's open cheque in exchange for his mother's crossed one. A momentary hesitation, and—the exchange was made.

Next morning the gentleman again

NEWS OF THE GOOD WORK IN THE OLD GULF OF ST. LAWRENCE COLONY.

Dodd's Almanac the Means of Helping Mr. Thomas Barter Down There—Read that Dodd's Kidney Pills Would Cure Heart Trouble—Tried them and Proved it True.

Cape La Hune, Nfld., Aug. 19.—The most popular remedy down here this last few years is undoubtedly Dodd's Kidney Pills. It is the only one of the host advertised which universally shows that it may be relied upon.

Medicines for Heart Trouble have been advertised before in Newfoundland but nobody placed any reliance in them. The trouble was that they did not act at the root of the matter—the Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills are entirely different to any other treatment for Heart Trouble; they act on the Kidneys first, and for that very reason are so successful.

Mr. Thomas Barter of Cape La Hune had trouble with his heart for years, and could find nothing to help him. But his own words will better tell the story.

"For over six years," writes Mr. Barter, "I had suffered intensely with palpitation of the heart and had to give up work. I could not do anything at all until I saw in Dodd's Almanac that Dodd's Kidney Pills would cure me. I then sent for six boxes. I used five of them and am completely cured. I can do my work again now as well as ever I could. I am not much of a writer but if you think this letter would help any other person by being printed in any of your publications you are at liberty to print it, for I am thoroughly grateful for Dodd's Kidney Pills."

left for London, this time without returning.

The cheque was wrong—the landlord's cheque, too, was wrong—in the sense that before payment could be stopped it had been cashed. Who the thief was, or how he had obtained possession of a cheque on Lady Soforth's bank, was never discovered. A hue-and-cry was raised, but nothing came of it, for the rogue had vanished into thin air.

The sequel was, if possible, more strange than the thing itself. One morning, the young lady who had been the bait to "draw" the father, was missing, and from that day to this has never been heard of. It is known that she fled to join the thief, for a letter, without date, address or signature, posted in London, told the tale.

AGRICULTURE FOR WOMEN.

A course of instruction for women in agriculture and horticulture was opened recently in the School of Agriculture, Moscow, with the authority of the Russian Minister of Agriculture. The subjects included agriculture, stock-breeding, rural economy, book-keeping, dairying, bee-keeping, gardening, and arboriculture, theoretical and practical. The course of instruction lasted four months, and was attended by fifty students, whose ages ranged from seventeen to forty-five, and who were either engaged in agriculture or preparing to teach in agricultural schools.

WEALTH IN WOOD MINES.

A curious source of wealth is reported by the French Consul at Mengtze, in Upper Tonkin. It lies in the wood mines. The wood originally was a fine forest, which the earth swallowed in some cataclysm. Some of the trees are a yard in diameter. They lie in a slanting direction and in sandy soils, which cover them to a depth of about eight yards. The wood furnished by these timber mines is imperishable, and the Chinese gladly buy it for coffins.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

AN INCONVENIENT BOTTLE.

An old farmer, who had been to the Metropolis, was describing to his friends the splendor of the hotel at which he stayed.

Everything was perfect, he said, all but one thing. They kept the light burning all night in my bedroom, a thing I ain't used to.

Well, said one wag, why didn't you blow it out.

Blow it out, said the farmer. How could I? The thing was inside a bottle!
