The Liberal.

RICHMOND HILL, October 17, 1901

UNKIND AND INOPPORTUNE.

All classes of people from both sides of politics have expressed sincere regret in the death of Hon. N. C. Wallace. Men who opposed him in various contests were ready to sink all differences in the hour of death, and to remember only his kindness of heart and other commendable qualities. Few men would think of entering the house of the bereaved family at such a time in order to advance their political influence, much less to thrust a knife into their professed friends. Yet that is what the World newspaper has done. On the morning after Mr. Wallace's death The World, whose editor-in-chief is Mr. W. F. Maclean, M. P., contained an editorial under the heading of "A Tragedy in Politics," from which the following is taken:

"Clarke Wallace died, so the doctors tell us, of pernicious anaemia. He also died of a broken heart. And what broke Clarke Wallace's heart was two things:

"First, the discovery that there was no room in the Conservative party for a member of Parliament in Canada who was of strong Protestant and British principles, disposed to assert the same, and

"Second, the still more painful discovery that there were men in the Orange Order, leaders in it like himself, who, while professing the principles which he held dear, were ready and willing to desert these principles to keep the Conservative party in office."

The World first charges the Conservative party, and secondly members of the Orange order, with Mr. Wallace's death. There may have been differences between Mr. Wallace and the above bodies. About these we have nothing to say. But we know that Mr. Wallace with all his success had too much spirit to die of a broken heart. And we know that to raise the question at this particular time shows a lack of feeling and human sympathy.

The Mail-Empire of Friday contained the following editorial note:

"Mr. Tarte has lost no time in placing his candidate in the field in West York. He has nominated Archie Campbell for the position, Mr. Campbell being sufficiently servile for his purposes. Mr. Tarte might have had the decency to wait for a few days."

Such a paragraph as the above is contemptible. Those who take time to think will know that neither Mr. Tarte nor any other person outside of West York will have a voice in selecting a candidate for this riding. Mr. Campbell will doubtless be the Liberal candidate whenever the election takes place, but the Mail's only object in bringing Mr. Tarte's name into this matter is to introduce the question of race and religion as it always does.

At the end of the twenty-first week, ending September 25th, the relative standing of the four leading dairy breeds at the Pan-American is practically unchanged as far as the total profit on butter is concerned. The contest, however, is becoming more interesting as the end draws near, and the past week has developed some unexpected features. The Guernseys as a herd are showing signs of weakening and stand fourth for the week on profit for estimated butter. The Jerseys are again in the lead with a profit of 7.41; Ayrshires second with 7.26; Holsteins third, 7.28; Guernseys fourth, 7.26; Shorthorns fifth, 6.51; and French Canadians sixth, 6.34.

Too Many Holidays.

To The Editor of THE LIBERAL:

SIR,—It seems to be the opinion of many of those parents who have children at school, that the trustees of the Richmond Hill schools are not studying the interests of the section when they allow the schools to be closed on so many occasions during the year. Any encouraging news last year from the seat of the South African war was the signal for a holiday, and the scholars kept themselves well posted in victories over the Boers. Last week pupils from 7 years' old and upwards petitioned for two holidays so that they might see the royal visitors, and the Board, or at least a majority of them, granted the request. Had the Duke and Duchess been a week in Toronto the trustees in all probability would have closed the schools for the week. No one could object to parents taking their children to see their future king, but to close both Public and High School for two whole days is quite a different thing. Probably not one scholar in five went from our schools to see the visitors.

Every school day missed endangers the chance of passing the examinations, and this may be the reason that our High School made such a poor show at the Departmental Examinations last summer.

Those parents who pay school fees, car fare or board for their children to attend our school, expect full time, and if the trustees wait until the parents petition for holidays, there will be less time lost and better satisfaction given all round.
