

ROTHSCHILD'S MAXIMS.

The following twelve maxims form part of the will of Mayor Anselm Rothschild, the founder of the great banking house at Frankfort. They are now attracting attention in Europe and are recommended to those who desire to succeed in life:

1. Seriously ponder over and thoroughly examine any project to which you intend to give your attention.
2. Reflect a long time, then decide promptly.
3. Go ahead.
4. Endure annoyances patiently and fight bravely against obstacles.
5. Consider honor as a sacred duty.
6. Never lie about a business affair.
7. Pay your debts promptly.
8. Learn how to sacrifice money when necessary.
9. Do not trust too much to luck.
10. Spend your time profitably.
11. Do not pretend to be more important than you really are.
12. Never become discouraged, work zealously and you will surely succeed.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE CLEARING OUT KIDNEY DISEASE.

Richard Quirk, One of a Score Cured in One Neighborhood, Tells How Pains of Twenty Years Standing Vanished Before the Great Kidney Remedy.

Fortune Harbour, Nfld., Nov. 16.—(Special).—There are a score of people in this neighborhood who suffered from Lame Back and other symptoms of Kidney Disease and who are now strong and healthy, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills. One of the most serious cases cured is that of Mr. Richard Quirk, and in an interview he says:

"I suffered for more than twenty years from Lumbago and Kidney Disease. I almost always had a severe pain in my back, so severe that during intervals for years I was totally unable to work.

"Doctors and medicines gave me little relief and after ten or twelve years I had almost made up my mind that my trouble was incurable. Then reading of cures by them led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I had not taken half a box before I experienced relief and after seven or eight boxes I was a perfect cure and a new man. The cure was permanent."

Cure your Backache with Dodd's Kidney Pills and you will never have Bright's Disease.

A GOOD DOG.

The man wanted to sell the dog, but the prospective buyer was suspicious and finally decided not to buy. The man then told him why he was so anxious to sell.

"You see," he said, "I bought the dog and trained him myself. I got him so he'd bark if a person stepped inside the gate, and thought, of course, I was safe from burglars. Then my wife wanted me to train him to carry bundles—and I did. If you put anything into his mouth it would stay there till someone took it away. Well, one night I woke up and heard someone in the next room. I got up, grabbed my gun, and started to investigate. They were there, three of them—and the dog."

"Didn't he bark?" interrupted the man.
"Not a bark; he was too busy."
"Busy! What doing?"
"Carrying the lantern for the burglars. If you know anybody who wants a good dog send them around."

Elsie: "You know, Dorothy, Bobby is our first cousin." Dorothy (on whom Bobby has made an unfavorable impression): "Is he? Well, I hope he's our last, that's all."

Curate: "And how did you like my harvest sermon, Mr. Wurzel?" "Not bad, sir; not bad at all, considering your total ignorance of the subject."

Russians Not Industrial Managers—Call in English.

The question of the British versus the Russian manager and overseer has long been interesting the Russian Government, and has occasionally found occupation for the British Ambassador in Russia, too, writes the Moscow correspondent of the London Standard. The Russian, to fill such a post, is required to have a thorough technical education, which in this country ranks with a university education, and the recipients of such training are gentlemen. They are not, however, practical, and suffer from the Russian fault, a very Oriental trait, of never accepting any post without immediately engaging two or three assistants to do the work. The British workman is the pick of that class which, at home, is earning thirty to fifty shillings a week. Out here he becomes a ruler of men, and, if steady and adaptable, generally dies wealthy. But a great many are not steady in a land which teems with cheap liquor, and still more of them are not adaptable, object to learning Russian, and speak English of a kind not intelligible to the uninitiated. But they get the work out of the "hands," and their labors mean money for their employers, whereas the "patriotic" owner who insists on having his own countrymen as overseers and managers too often finds his innocent cotton-spinning mill converted into a chancellery on the model of a Government office, with myriads of scribes, and every post of importance carrying two or three "assistants"; the natural result is that profits run out in expenses, and very frequently a riot completes the trouble, the irresponsible "assistants" not always fairly weighing the balance between their own comfort and the complaints of the workers. There was one mill where the highly qualified Russian manager introduced a system of correspondence by which an overlooker could not report the most trivial circumstances except on paper in proper form, and a workman's complaint against his immediate superior passed as many "instances" as a Government project, the reply, in writing, reaching the luckless complainant in about three months after date, duly numbered and countersigned like a Ministerial paper. That particularly highly qualified Russian manager terminated his career at the mill in question with two battalions of infantry and a sotnia of Cossacks in the millyard. They stopped there a month, and when they had gone the people insisted upon having an Englishman to rule over them once more.

BROTHERLINESS.

Good Work of the English Society of Friends.

Lord Robert's request that heirlooms looted from Boer farms during the late war be returned by the British possessors has met with quick and willing response. The London Express says that more than forty Bibles taken from veld homesteads have been returned to the Society of Friends. The society has continued the work by cataloguing the volumes, with all notes and marks which give a hint of the names and addresses of the owners, who are already being sought through the agency of philanthropic persons in South Africa.

Four or five of them are magnificent books, and must be of great value. Bound in solid embossed leather, with heavy brass clasps, and containing many maps and steel engravings, they are filled with notes of the births, marriages and deaths of the families to which they belong.

Such a Bible was returned recently by Lord Chesham, who was merely keeping the book until he should have a chance to restore it to its owner. On the fly-leaf he had written:

"This Bible was found on the veld at Mohensfontein Farm, Orange Free State, South Africa, on Sunday, April 8, 1900, and rescued from a Kaffir by me, to be taken care of until claimed by the proper owner, who is now on commando some miles away."

Other Bibles are heavy folio volumes printed in the seventeenth and early eighteenth century, but there are many cheap pocket editions. One of the smaller ones now in possession of the society has an inscription which shows that it was a present from a young Boer to his sweetheart, who had evidently given it back to her hero when he went forth to fight.

It has been suggested in the columns of the London Times and elsewhere that the return to the British of personal treasures which may be in the hands of the Dutch would be a kindly and Christian act, and it is believed that this side of the matter will soon be placed before the Dutch ministers in the two leading colonies.

FOUND THE BURGLAR.

A Quaker had his house broken into by a burglar a few months ago, and several valuables stolen. He did not inform the police, however, but kept the affair to himself.

The following evening a neighbor remarked to him:

"I am sorry to hear of your house being burgled, Mr. Fry. I hope your loss is not heavy?"

"Friend," said the Quaker, "thou must know the extent of my loss as well as I can do, since thou art the burglar. I spoke not to a soul of what had happened, and thou art the first to mention it to me—hence I know thou art the burglar, and will trouble thee for my property." He got it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J.
