A SECRET REVEALED

CHAPTER I.

swing. At one time, in the good or the fair, once a year at least, in every town, large or small; there were merry England has somehow or other grown a very sad and grave and serious England, and if you want to see a fair you must go far down into the country, into those remote distracts where men-and of enjoying themselves in the open air.

Cumberleigh Fair was held just outside the market town on a good sized common; it lasted three days, and during those three days the good folk of Cumberleigh talked, thought, ate, drunk fair. It was the one event of the year to which the counmarried three weeks come Fairtime," and so on; just as the Italian reckons from some grand festival, or the Spaniard counts from some famous bull-fight.

It was the third and the last day, and the fair was at its height. The lanes between the booths were crowded with a dense throng of a contemptuous smirk and shook turned to the glory whence she pleasure-makers, men and women in their Sunday best; some of their children on their shoulders.

The row was awful and indescrib- and he held up a stone bottle. able. From one side came the yells imploring the people to "Walk up!" drinking booths snatches of tipsy in her direction. choruses floated out and mingled with the general din. Merry-gorounds and swings revolved and swung to the melodious strains of steam organs. Every showman had a drum, and seemed to be trying to knock the head in. A couple of brass bands played unceasingly. Children blew innumerable tin trumpets, and the ingenious gentleman ed. with the three thimbles and a pea shouted hoarse exhortations to the

There was every kind of show. been like that most of the day." The fat woman was here, in company with the giant and the dwarf and the living skelton. The spotted nobleman was a great attraction, with a kind of defiance, and setting course, you knew there was no and the wild man of the woods roar- his wide-awake a little on one side, hope.' ed and yelled invitingly through the thereby giving himself a rakish air. bars of his cage.

A little apart from the rest were the ring and appraoched the girl. half a dozen gypsy caravans. No She did not see him or hear him, for life," he replied, at last leaving fair would be complete without or at any rate did not appear to hold of her hands, and turning to gypsies, and they were at Cumber- | do so, for a gypsy's ears are sharp | walk slowly on her way with her, leigh in full force. Every now and as the panther's, until he was close so that the sunset was all behind then a dark-skinned, black-haired upon her, then she started, but not them, and the mountain spur curvlass, with the usual crimson shawl, with fear, and turned her large eyes ing out round the broad bay wore draped hood fashion over her lus- upon him questioningly. The man's a garment of glory, its bare, timetrous head would glide in and about crafty eyes wavered and fell before worn summit was transmuted to the crowd with that easy and grace- hers. ful gait which these strange people have inherited from the days "when that was meant for, but fell short he added. "To come so suddenly, Pharaoh was king over Egypt," and of, a bullying one. "Mooning and and at the very critical moment." whisper, "Let me tell your fortune, star-gazing again, eh?" kind gentleman. Cross the Gypsy's hand with silver, pretty lady!"

steps of the caravans, or played a word, you are! It's a pity you about the horses' heels with impun- don't make use of your sharpness. ity, and in the centre of the colony, There's mouths to be fed, my girl, group of gypsies were eating their van like a wax figger." afternoon meal as placidly as if they | She drew herself to her full height kinder-any feelings-" had pitched their tent on some syl- and looked at him with a kind of van island. fire a young girl leaned against the cepting the reproof. side of the caravan. She was supposed to be partaking of the meal "but I'll go now." with the rest of the company; but | She drew the shawl around her forgotten, I never shall." she was not eating, and the dark face as she spoke, and moved to-expression. tinguish her from the other women self down on the ground. of her tribe, with the exception that "I've started her," he said with a the frock of brown wolsey was clean grin. "You don't know how to "It was hard." and without rent, or, indeed, darn, manage her, any of you. You spoil She made no rejoinder, her lips and that she wore no gold rings in her among you. Why shouldn't she were quivering. The soft deep lustre her ears or on her fingers, as did the work like the rest? Ugh! I hate of her eyes was bent upon his avert- nicety." rest. But the dress was well-made idleness and loafing. Where's that ed head; she kept back her tears and well-fitting, and she seemed to bottle gone?" wear it and the shawl with that in- The girl made her way through the now, its changing glory clothed both ury. It ought to be possible to describable air of ease and grace pushing, seething mass, repeating figures with a rosy radiance; in the make one for about £200 ($1,000), can never-no never-be acquired. but slim and well-built; there was silver," but she uttered it mechani- They had reached a clump of oliveyouth and strength and health in cally, and without any desire to trees, the gnarled gray roots every limb, in the very poise of the gain clients, and the people paid no which made a favorite way-side seat, shapely head on the slender neck, heed. upright as a column. Her hair was About this time a young man slightly shadowed by dark foliage, dark; I had almost written black, entered the fair. He had been walk- looked like rudely hewn stone pilbut remembered that the scientific ing with the steady, swinging pace lars. Here Philip proposed that men have declared that there is no of which puts the milestones behind they should sit a while. "For we black hair. Her eyes were large, one, across the common on the cart cannot part like this," he added. lustrous, and, unlike a gypsy's, soft track which led from the high road "No life must ever be mingled with and melting, with the softness of to the park and mansion of Monk mine. All my life I must be lonethe stag, not that of the ox,

That she wore a better dress and and entered the fair.

Cumberleigh Fair was in full of reposeful dignity which sat so He was five feet eleven, broad-shoul- seem to want a good deal of per- fairly well but the ice crop was un-bad old times, there used to be a turmoil, she stood lost in thought move. He was dressed in a suit of shall be an old maid," she sighed, cream separators in this immediate and her own day-dreams; for even a tweed, which seemed to have grown looking demurely in his face with a vicinity, but I bought one. gypsy who lives in a caravan by on him, and which bore evidence of quaint sparkle in her bright dark My power at this time was supseveral in London, for instance. But telling fortunes may have day- a long and dusty walk. dreams.

Presently a man came around the caravan. He was a gypsy like the rest, but was dressed in a shabby suit, which might have been the cast off of a shop-man or clerk. He was women-have not yet grown ashamed a man of about fifty, with the air and expression which dissipation and excess stamps upon gentle and simple alike, and his countenance was not rendered more prepossessing by a pair of crafty eyes, and lips which wore a smirk and a sneer by

He stopped short as he saw the try people-and the towns-people girl seemed about to speak, then too-looked forward to and back- turned aside and entered the ring ward at. They dated from it. It around the fire. He walked with a hind her, she appeared to be descendwas: "I bought that horse at peculiar gait, which was intended to ing toward him out of the very heart Cumberleigh Fair." "They were conceal a slight limp, for he had of the western glory as she had come once been strong and handsome, and to him first from the heart of the was still vain.

the men, looking up with the faint cent gold, with the accustomed laugh which greets a ne'er-do-well proud poise of the head, her face who is half feared, half scorned. shadowed by the contrst with the "How goes it—tea?"

his head. else going, eh, Jake?" said another, sun, and the vivid joy that flashed

The man took it, drank from it tion. In a moment he had met of the showmen descanting on the without a word, and stood silently her, taken her hands and was standmerits of their particular shows, and looking at the fire; then he glanced ing speechless face to face with sideways at the motionless figure of her. Both hearts beat quickly, but From another there came the dull, the girl, and jerked his thumb over there was no surprise in Ada's face heavy roar of a lion in the menag- his shoulder inquiringly. The man erie; while from many, too many, he addressed by the gesture looked she asked, after a little pause.

> Jake, half fiercely, half sullenly. of us?"

There was a general laugh at the mother's fatal illness came-" "us." The day on which Uncle Jake had worked had not yet dawn- even then. And now--' looking up from the kettle of stew with an aunt whose lungs are weak. crowd to come and win their for- she was inspecting. "Best not in- You know-perhaps you didn't know? terfere with her, Uncle Jake. She's We came home in the autumn. Jake emitted a snarl under his saw her-how lovely she was! strolbreath.

at once cruel and repulsive, he left a sudden glimpse of heaven in

"There are no stars or moon, Uncle Jake," she said quietly.

Nut-brown children sat on the "Oh," he said. "You're sharp on smoldering fire in her eyes, then they Just outside this ring around the softened, and she nodded, as if ac-lashes, had a dreamy and far-away looking after her until the slim fig- duty as once before."

ure had disappeared in the throng, In dress there was little to dis- went back to the fire, and let him-which is born with some women, and the formal-"Let the gypsy tell your silence the low caressing murmur of he thought. fortune, let the gypsy tell your for the quiet sea was heard from the She was about the middle height, tune. Cross the gypsy's hand with beach below.

Towers, and hearing the noise and ly." Beauty is not uncommon among blare of the fair on the slight hol- "Why?" Ada asked. "Philip, you give you a nice story book." Jack the gypsies, but this girl's loveliness low to the left of him. he had stop- are morbid. Yau have suffered; -"And how long must I be a good was of a striking and exquisite or- ped and looked, and listened, hesi- your feeling for honor is keen; you boy to get a bicycle, papa?" tated a moment, then turned off are over-sensitive. I know all; surely more than a boy, and there were deed be a mean cur to take advantwo things noticeable about him. tage of your generosity and unsel-First, that he was a gentleman; and fishness." been called the fatal gift, and yet coming tears. it is the gift which most women de- "Dearest," he added, "you are sire for themselves and their daugh- very young, you don't know what ters, and the one gift in man which, happiness may be in store for you." when it is combined with strength, Then he laid his case before her and they admire and worship.

face which Blair Leighton is so fond, pecially her father's. "It will be termined to keep as many cows as and justly fond, of painting. Every far easier to forget that you think," possible and supply butter to privfeature truly but delicately cut, dark he said, in conclusion. eyes full of fire and life and the love "Of course," she returned, with ing city, writes C. W. Weston. The

(To be Continued.)

A Dying Promise

CHAPTER XLVII.

The sunset splendors glowed bewar-storm; she came with firm, "Hullo, Uncle Jake!" said one of light steps over a path of incandesglow behind and around her, Uncle Jake screwed his mouth into dark eyes full of light; his face was came, it seemed made of light, "Tea? Not while there's anything doubly transfigured by the setting through him at the sweet appari-"You did not expect to meet me?"

"No; I never expected to meet "Oh Madge," he said with a you; but when things are bad, when laugh. "She's mooning as usual." | the storm is at the worst, you al-"She's always mooning," said ways appear, an angel of comfort." "A loyal friend, I hope," she re-

'Why don't she work like the rest plied, gently; "the first time we were dancing, and the news of your

"Yes, but you were my comfort,

"I wish I could comfort you now "Let her alone," said a woman, We arrived two days before. I am Father has retired. Yes, we actually ling in the garden. Oh! it must "I'm not afraid of her," he said, have been such a shock, though, of

"And now you are here, it is like darkness. This will be a memory burning gold against the lucid sky. "Well, Madge," he said in a tone "But is it really your living self?"

> "And now tell me all you wish to tell about this sorrowful business, dear, Philip. What of poor Captain is very improper, but I have not years.

How well timed this meeting is!

"Ah! but you must, you will," he eyes, half veiled by the long black ward the crowd, and Uncle Jake cried; "you must help me to do my

"Did I help you?" she asked, in a very soft, low voice. "I think you did not need much helping."

"You made it easier," he returned.

with an effort. The sun was lower

it is for me to decide."

be ascribed to the fact that she was deed, as ages are reckoned nowadays, princely nature. But I should in- his wife.

secondly, that the gods had been 'No, not generosity, not unselvery good to him in the matter of fishness," she interposed, very softgood form and features. Beauty has ly, her eyes were blinded by swift-satisfactorily proved his unsuitabil- down farm, and in order to bring it This young man had the kind of ity from every point of view, es- to a higher state of cultivation deof life, with brows dark and arched; the old princess air; "you needn't cows purchased, the next step was the queen of her tribe, and perhaps and hair that, closely cut as it was, marry me unless you like. I shall to build an icehouse and get a cabshe owed to the same fact the air broke into short ripples and waves. not force you into it, though you do inet creamer. This outfit worked well upon her at this moment, when, dered and straight-limbed, and mov- suasion. I shan't even break my certain, and the distance to draw as if unconscious of the surrounding ed only as a practiced athlete can heart, don't expect that. But I it long. At this time there were no eyes, "and that is far worse than a plied by hand and for awhile the broken heart, I am told. What com- separator appeared to run quite easfort is it to be wretched, if one ily, but after the novelty wore off over?"

"Ada!" he exclaimed.

doubt," she replied, gravely. "I the engine up underneath the floor in shock you, Captain Randal; I think the milk room, put up a line of I had better wish you good-even- shafting and was soon separating ing," she added, rising and making and churning with none of that tired him a little bow before moving se- feeling which I had so lately been exdately away.

"Good gracious! Ada! What are One morning on attempting to you thinking of?" he cried, over- start the machine it absolutely retaking her in a state of utter be- fused to go, I made a hurried trip wilderment.

plied, tranquilly.

row? For Heaven's sake do stop a points had simply gummed over, moment!'

any more, Mahaeaj Salaam!" and all kinds of vehement protesta- fused to work, I found the heat had tions, adjurations, and assurances of drawn out the platinum points so undying devotion poured into ap- that instead of a spark being made parently indifferent ears. She was as the electricity jumped across the induced to resume her seat on the short interval between them, they olive-roots, her bright face glowing touched one another. The current like a splendid flower against the passed without sparking and no exrugged, stony-looking trunks, her plosion took place. A knife blade dark eyes half-veiled. "Yes," she passed between the points separated was thinking to herself, "it is about them and thus remedied the difficulty time you began. I do think I have and I was again doing business. a right as a woman, to a little It is evident that had I been procourtship."

that Princess Ada was permitting spared a great deal of trouble. My her hands to be kissed.

believe in me?" can't exist without me," she return- to a steam engine.

and did not finish her sentence. I was so sorry for you! You are perience and a little study had given son, as the dear Hindoos say." (To be Continued.)

DID YOU WIND THE CLOCK?

The Question Need Not Now be Asked Often.

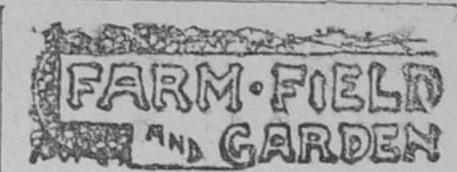

The New York Herald has the following cable despatch:-The Hon. farmers who have the desire to do Richard Strutt, son of Lord Ray- well are deterred from furnishing the leigh, has made a radium clock which necessary shelter for stock in winwill go for two thousand years with- ter. Again, many others are renting out winding up. In this clock a and of course cannot afford to erect small piece of gold leaf is electrified costly and permanent buildings. Medway? and what are you meaning by means of a very small quantity of These and other causes operate to radium salt. It bends away from the keep many thousands of stock out "We go to England to-morrow, metal substance and keeps on moving in the weather, suffering and losing under this influence until it touches flesh to themselves and money to so to speak, was gathered, around and money to be got, and you don't Yet, I ought not to see you, I sup- the side of the vessel. At the moa kettle suspended over a fire, a do your share, leaning up agen that pose; though I know that you must ment of contact it loses its electrical have forgotten by this time any- charge, upon which it springs back and is electrified again. The repe-"Women, of course, have no con- tition of this process over and over stancy, no depth; they can turn on again is the whole secret, and Sir the feelings expected of them at any William Ramsay considers it might moment," she answered, with a kind be expected to go on, barring acci-"I was resting," she said simply, of plaintive disdain. "No doubt it dents, for a couple of thousand Asked if such an instrument could be made a reliable timekeeper by which a business man could keep his appointments, Sir William answered: cerned. You have the energy, and in this way, and although it may unless the thing stuck at some time seem a waste of feed, it will be or other it would go on and on, and found to pay in the long run, in the could be regulated to move the hands saving of feed which it will take on a clock face to a mechanical to keep up the animal heat from

Sir William did not think such a clock would be a very expensive lux-

A man applied for an engagement at a theatre. "I inclose you a newspaper cutting," he wrote, show you that I have aptitude for lows: "The prisoner, who denied the ing crops. assault, conducted his own case, and defended himself in a manner somewhat dramatic."

a good boy until next Saturday I'll

THE GASOLINE ENGINE.

About 11 years ago I bought a run ate families living in the neighborcan't talk about it and be cried it began to run very hard. I bought a 11 horse power gasoline engine. It was an experimental machine but ap-"I am a most improper person, no peared to work nicely. I blocked periencing.

to the city and a good natured in-"Thinking of going home," she re- ventor accompanied me to my home and upon taking off the cylinder cap "And I going to England to-mor- found that the olatinum exploding thereby preventing their sparking. "Well, but what is the use? You Again all was smooth sailing and won't have me, and there's an end with an occasional cleaning up of of it. I am not going to ask you points my engine for awhile worked very nicely. But upon one of these Then of course she was detained, occasional cleanings, after it had re-perly supplied with instructions at As for Philip he knew nothing but the beginning I should have been engine is now working as well as it "This is all very well," she said at ever did at any time during its best last. "Now perhaps I may be al- behavior, although it has been in lowed to return to my poor sick constant use for five years. I run both the cream separator and a 50-"Ada, how can you jest? Do you gallon churn at the same time. I have simply to give the balance "I believe that you are a foolish wheel a whirl when it starts off like boy, and don't know what is good a thing of life. The expense of operfor you. From what you say, you ating is as nothing when compared

ed. "And yet you won't-" here In the same manner belts may be she burst into a happy little laugh run out through the window and other machinery run. In fact there "Do you know," she added with a is almost no end to the variety of sudden change of manner, "I look work which this handy little machine on you as a son. I think I adopted will accomplish. As I have already you on that first night at the ball, shown, my engine was an experimen-Poor boy," I thought, "he has no tal one, and I a green operator withmother perhaps by this time. Oh! out proper instructions. Until exmy father, and my mother, and my me a knowledge of its principles and working; it was not a success. Since then two of my neighbors have each purchased an engine though larger in > size and vastly improved and both are giving satisfaction.

> > LIVE STOCK IN WINTER.

On account of scant means many their owners. In some cases it may be well nigh impossible to remedy the evil, but no doubt in many it might be improved by plenty of forethought and just a little work.

Even if your threshing is already done and you have no other shelter, it will pay to erect a stout framing on the order of a lean-to with the open side to the south and cover it well with straw. If threshing is not yet over, it will be no extra work to stack it that way as the straw comes from the machine.

Stock fodder, hay or other mater--"Yes, so far as the principle is con- | ial may also be used to advantage increased exposure standing out in all kinds of weather.

If the farm needs the manure (and what farm doesn't) there will also be a very large saving on that score. There will not only be a larger quantity saved, but the quality will at least be doubled and probably, in more than ordinary wet seasons, even quadrupled by avoiding the leaching rains which ordinarily carry and the massive trunks of which, the stage." The cuttir was as fol- are immediately beneficial to grow-

QUALITY OF MILK.

The majority of investigations Papa-"Now Jack, if you will be concerning the improvement of the quality of milk seems to indicate that a dairyman must look to the improvement of breed rather than to the selection of feed. Within the breed he must select animals which A woman tells fairy tales to her show a high percentage of fat in the wore it with exceptional grace might He was a young man-scarcely in- "You have a noble heart, a most children and a man tells them to milk, as well as animals that will produce a large quantity.