

CITY OF COBALT FIRE-SWEPT

Early Morning Blaze Destroyed Over 2,000 Structures.

A despatch from Cobalt says: Cobalt is painfully familiar with the iron clang of the fire bell in the early morning hours, and when the whole town was aroused at four o'clock on Friday, people found a blaze already painting the early morning sky red and knew that the inevitable had happened, and that fire had broken into the jam of shacks and crazy wooden buildings on the Haileybury-road, and fanned by a slight breeze, was cracking up the buildings around it like orange boxes.

For six hours the fire raged, and the result is the destruction of about 2,000 buildings, rendering homeless 2,000 people, in a district, about half a mile long by 100 yards wide, known as "Frenchtown" and tenanted chiefly by foreigners. The loss is placed at about $300,000, while the insurance will be less than $50,000. This is because the insurance rates have been almost prohibi-bitve—from 10 to 15 per cent.—and in some cases the companies cancelled the risks held.

The fire originated in Joe Lee's Chinese restaurant, supposedly from an overheated stove. Two waitresses, who roomed in the building, heard the flames crackling, and aroused the other inmates. As previous serious fires have originated in Chinese buildings there is a decidedly anti-Oriental sentiment here to-day.

The local volunteer firemen were assisted by the brigades from New Liskeard and Haileybury, which arrived by special train about 5.30. The water supply was inadequate and recourse was had to dynamite to blow up buildings in hopes of checking the progress of the fire.

It was during the dynamiting of one building that a Finlander, who did not understand the warnings given him, and who rushed back into the house, was blown up and killed.

ROBBERS OBTAIN $10,000

Three Masked Men Held Up Manager of Rainy River Bank.

A despatch from Rainy River, Ont., says: In the most daring robbery ever perpetrated in this section of the country, the local branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia was robbed of between $9,000 and $10,000 shortly before noon on Friday. While Manager Templeton was in the building alone three masked men, believed to be from Spooner, Minn., entered, and at the point of revolvers made Templeton abstain from giving the alarm. One of the bandits kept him under cover while the other two made a rapid search for the currency. They were not long in finding the money owing to the fact that considerable of it is always in plain view at this time of the day. After securing nearly $10,000 the robbers ran across the street and made north in the direction of the C. P. R. tracks. Manager Templeton as soon as possible sounded the alarm and a posse was at once organized and is now in pursuit. The robbers were all the more daring from the fact that many people were on the streets and passing the bank while the bandits were at work.

The revolvers with which the holdup was accomplished were stolen from the John Weeks Hardware Company, Spooner, on the night of June 30, three men having previously visited the store to look at firearms. Three answering the same description purchased cartridges from the Rat Portage Company's store at this point Friday morning.

A regrettable accident occurred during the arming of the posse. A rifle was accidentally discharged in the hands of one of the men, the bullet passing through the leg of Mr. Field, the accountant of the bank.

MEETS HORRIBLE DEATH.

Detroit Woman Aeronaut Dies on a Live Wire.

A despatch from Detroit, Mich., says: Entangled in a network of live wires, many of them carrying high voltage electricity, Mrs. Dell Meixell, a female aeronaut, met a horrible death at Lowell, Mich., on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Meixell's balloon ascension was one of the features of a Fourth of July celebration. The balloon rose gracefully from the earth, but before it could reach a safe height, a gust of wind struck it and drove it at a high rate of speed towards a network of wires on the main street of the town. Mrs. Meixell saw her danger, and as the parachute bar neared the wires, she let go and caught the topmost cable. She missed her hold, but fell with her body directly across it, and hung as though dead, her feet twisted in a mass of smaller wires below. Someone had presence of mind to telephone to the electric power plant to shut off the current, which was done with all possible speed. In the meantime, however, a small spiral column of smoke began to rise from the woman's body where it came in contact with the wires, and there were horrified cries from the spectators, who were compelled to look on while the current continued its deadly work. When the electricity was finally shut off the body of the unfortunate woman dropped to the ground forty feet below. Doctors found life in the inanimate form, but it was so slight that the woman died shortly after midnight. One hand was burned almost entirely off, and she was otherwise injured.

Fourth of July carnage in the United States was heavy.

SCORE OF MEN WERE KILLED

A Sudden Landslide at Newport, Eng., Was Most Disastrous.

A despatch from Newport, England, says: It is estimated that twenty men perished on Friday by the sudden collapse of the west wall of the new lock at the entrance to the Alexandra dock where fifty men were working in a trench sixty feet deep, preparing for the laying of a concrete foundation. Without warning the heavy shoring timbers gave way, the entire structure collapsing, and carrying down with it thousands of tons of earth, railway lines, many cars and four travelling cranes. The men at the bottom of the trench had no chance to escape, but many of those working nearer the surface were uninjured. Of the fifty men in the trench twenty-six have been accounted for.

The work of rescuers began immediately after the collapse, and three men were taken out alive. The bodies of some of the dead also were rescued. At midnight, aided by electric lights and flare lamps, the rescuers were still busy with their work. Thousands of persons had gathered to watch the weird scene.

Conversations were being held with a few of the imprisoned men with the aid of speaking tubes and stimulants and cigarettes were passed down to them; but there was little hope of rescuing the victims as the removal of the debris that was pinning them down was likely to cause further falls of earth and beams.

A DIPLOMAT ASSASSINATED

The Famous Statesman, Curzon Wyllie Shot Dead in London.

A despatch from London, England, says: A startling double assassination of a political character occurred late on Thursday night towards the conclusion of a public gathering at the Imperial Institute. An Indian student, whose name is not known, shot and killed Lieut.-Colonel Sir William Hutt Curzon Wyllie and Dr. Calas La Loaca of Shanghai.

Wyllie, who had held important Indian appointments, fell dead on the spot. He showed signs of life after he fell and was hurried to St. George's Hospital, but on arrival there it was found that he was dead. Those near the assassin seized and held him until the arrival of the police. He had two revolvers, a dagger and a knife. All were new, and it is believed that the crime was premeditated.

The gathering at the Imperial Institute, a building devoted to Indian and other colonial functions, was an "at home" to Indian students. D. W. Thorburn, one of the guests, thus graphically describes the scene attending the murders:—"It was near 11 o'clock, and the musical programme was just concluding when I saw a middle-aged English gentleman conversing with a young Indian student.

the greatest rapidity at the head of the Englishman.

"Then came another shot as the Englishman fell, and a sixth, which struck an elderly Indian gentleman standing a few yards off, and who fell shot in the side.

"I rushed at the assassin and others sprang forward at the same time. We seized him, but he struggled, and, wrestling one hand free, placed the revolver to his forehead and pulled the trigger. It clicked harmlessly, as he had fired all his shots. Meantime there was a terrible scene and commotion, and the folding doors were finally closed to prevent the people from looking on the fearful sight.

"At this moment someone exclaimed, 'Why, it is Curzon Wyllie.' Then a stately woman in evening dress came upstairs from the cloak room to discover what had happened. Looking at the recumbent figure, and not immediately recognizing it, she said, 'Poor fellow.' She then knelt down and as she looked closely at the disfigured face, a look of horror leaped into her eyes and she exclaimed: 'It is my husband?' It was Lady Wyllie, who had left her husband only a few minutes previously.

"A group of men near by were holding the assassin, whose other victim was groaning on the ground a few yards away."

"Suddenly the native drew a revolver and fired four shots with

Reports of the storm had been coming in on Friday, and tell tales of suffering and devastation. Three deaths have occurred, several others were so severely injured that their lives are despaired of, and a score of people were more or less injured in the French settlement around St. Antoine, 15 miles north of here. In many cases farm buildings were totally destroyed, together with stock, the heaviest losers being the Hackett and Raymond families.

Fatality on C. P. R. Fifty Miles West of North Bay.

A despatch from North Bay says:

Ashland Ardell, C. P. R. conductor, was killed near Markstay, fifty-five miles west of North Bay, on Wednesday night, while walking along the track. Ardell's train was stalled by a freight wreck which had blocked the line, and he had walked out to a farm house one mile away, where a party was in progress. Returning to his train he must have been struck by the westbound Winnipeg express, his mangled body being picked up on Thursday morning by a section man. Ardell leaves a widow and one child in North Bay.

GASOLINE TANK EXPLODED

Terrible Dominion Day Tragedy Reported From Nova Scotia.

A despatch from Yarmouth, N. S., says: Two boys killed, four seriously injured and a station building destroyed on the Halifax and Southwestern Railway at Shag Harbor, Shelburne County, resulted on Thursday from boys celebrating the glorious first and exploding a barrel of gasoline. About 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon it was discovered that the combined passenger station and freight shed was on fire and burning fiercely. A locomotive was run up abreast of the scene and the train's fire apparatus was at once put to work, with the result that the fire was overcome as the building was about half destroyed. The trainmen at once commenced an investigation.

From the incoherent utterances of the woman station agent it appeared that a number of boys, perhaps seven or eight all told, had been playing about the station celebrating Dominion Day. One of them had a candle and just before the mishap he went into the station and asked the agent for a match, which she gave him. He returned to his companions and an instant later a deafening explosion was heard. A barrel of gasoline had been standing on the station platform. This explosive liquid was ignited.

From the incoherent utterances of the woman station agent it appeared that a number of boys, perhaps seven or eight all told, had

One of the boys was found dying beyond the railroad track. The top of his head was literally blown off and his brains were scattered about in a terrible manner. Another was found lying on the platform near the spot where the barrel stood. He had evidently been rendered unconscious and had been burned to death in a very short time. Four others were found in various positions, all unconscious.
