

THE STRIKE SETTLED.

The strike on the Grand Trunk Railway appears to be settled, and doubtless everybody is glad. The result is a compromise, neither the company nor the strikers having accomplished just what they claimed was right and proper. The 18 per cent. increase in wages, promised at the beginning of the strike, will be given the men, and the standard rates will go into effect on the 1st of January, 1912, instead of January 1, 1913, as first proposed by the company.

Judging by the newspaper comments in various parts of the country it is safe to say that the greater sympathy is on the side of the striking railway men. It is quite possible, however, that in many cases the situation was judged from motives of policy, rather than as a matter of right or wrong. Had the merchants and other business men and the public generally not been inconvenienced by the poor passenger service, and the much poorer freight service, and the G. T. R. would have won easily. And we believe it might have been better in the end had the company been allowed to win, as the G. T. R. in this particular case seemed more reasonable than the union employees. When the trouble could not be adjusted by the opposing parties it was laid before the Government Conciliation Board. That body recommended that the men's wages be raised 18 per cent. The company agreed to accept this rate, but would not agree to pay the standard wages—the same as the C. P. R.—till January 1, 1913. When the trainmen refused to accept that date the company offered to have the matter settled by arbitration. That matter was also rejected, but the strikers afterwards agreed to arbitrate provided they were allowed to name the arbitrators.

As the company could not accept the above, they set to work to engage new men to carry on their service asking no favors except that the Government would protect their property. They lost money it is true, but that is their own business if they were willing to see their trade going to the C. P. R. and other lines. However, if the strike is now permanently settled it will be a good thing for the business of the country.

Thornhill.

A good time is being looked forward to at the Lawn Social to be held on the grounds of Mr. Allison Wednesday evening, August 10, under the auspices of the choir of the Methodist Church. A good musical programme is being prepared for the occasion. Everybody will receive a warm welcome. The admission will be 15 cents, and this includes ice cream and cake.

A number of stalwarts from this section attended the barn raising of Mr. James Heaslip at Lansing last Saturday. The new bank barn is 102 x 32 feet and will have all modern conveniences. More than 200 people were present, including many ladies. During the contest Mr. John McKenzie of Willowdale was struck by a rafter receiving painful injuries, though it is hoped are not serious.

Mr. Robert Thompson was honored at the last annual meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge held at Belleville, by being appointed Assistant Director of Ceremonies.
