YOUNG FOLKS

PRECIOUS STONES.

"At length the little princess wandered into a beautiful garden. Fountains showered pearls and sapphires into basins of the purest silver, and golden birds, flitting among the trees, brought huge diamonds, rubies and amethysts for her to play with.

Marion frowned and closed the fairy-tale book with a snap.

"O dear," she sighed, "I wish I could be a princess in a fairy-tale for once, and have rubies and diamonds to play with, and gather gold by the pailful as the Princess Irene did !" and curling up on the sofa, she gazed disconsolately into the fireplace.

Aunt Grace stopped sewing and looked at her little niece; then smiling, she turned and looked out through the window. The lawn was velvety in the warm sunshine and ablaze with flowers. Out beyond, the yellow cornfields rippled in the wind, and through the violet marshlands the river curved and glittered.

"You can gather jewels far greater and more wonderful than those the little princess played with," said Aunt Grace, pushing the win-dow up, "and you can walk on gold if you wish to, Marion."

Marion uncurled and sat up, her dark eyes wide with astonishment. "You cannot find them by frowning into a sooty fireplace," said

Aunt Grace. "We must hunt for them; we may find the princess, too -who knows!" And laughing gai-ly, she began to fold her sewing. The frown disappeared from Marion's face, and jumping up, she followed her aunt across the piazza and out on the green lawn. "What jewel shall we look for first, and what color is it, Mari'on ?'

"Rubies," said Marion, growing interested, "and they are red, a deep, beautiful red, and pearls are—'' "'Hold on,'' said Aunt Grace; "one at a time, please. See! I And she stood with her eyes shaded, looking toward the south end of the garden.

"Where? I don't see any," said Marion, in a doubting tone. "Look hard and you'll see them glowing and nodding in the sun." "Oh, the roses!" cried Marion. "You mean flowers, don't you, aunty ?"

"Yes, dear, I think the beautiful, fragrant, living flowers are the rarest gems of all. We will call them God's jewels. Just see how He has studded our garden with them !

They had reached the roses by this time, and Marion, with eyes glowing, stooped and broke one off, smoothing its satiny petals with Marion gazed at the river with a new wonder in her heart. "I never noticed it was so beautiful before,'' she murmured. "There's something beautiful everywhere!"

'The fairy-tale has all come true, Aunt Grace !" she cried, throwing her arms round her aunt.

"And you may be the princess," exclaimed Uncle Ed, coming up in time to hear the last remark, "and will row the princess up to the Eagle's Nest in time to watch the sun set! And then we will crown her queen!"

And handing the basket and oars to Aunt Grace, he swung Marion up to the dizzy height of his broad shoulders, and the three started merrily down the meadow toward the boat-house .- Youth's Companlon.

ACCOMMODATING.

It was an overcast, indeterminate sort of a day, but the drug clerk was cheerful as he woistled behind the prescription desk and chatted with a friend in the front shop. Presently a customer came in and made a small purchase. "Fine day," he remarked. "Great !" replied the clerk, enthusiastically.

The customer went out and was followed by another. He, too, made a small purchase and commented on the weather.

'Mean weather," he remarked. "Beastly !" said the clerk, dolefully.

"Getting warmer," remarked a third customer.

"Hot!" said the clerk.

Ten minutes passed. Another individual drifted in from the outside world and made a purchase.

"Chilly, isn't it?" he said to the clerk.

"Cold as the pole !" agreed the clerk, with a shiver.

His friend had listened to these exchanges with interest. 'See here,'' he demanded, "what kind of weather do you think this is, anyway?" "Same kind as the customer," replied the drug clerk.
