THE SOULES FAMILY.

Tuesday's Globe contained the following history of the Soules family, formerly of this place:—Daniel Soule, son of Daniel and grandson of George and Lydia Howland Soule, was born in Nine Partners, Dutchess County, New York, and being a Royalist at the close of the revolution (1784) went to Nova Scotia and with his eight sons and three daughters, as a reward for his loyalty to King George, received a large tract of land on the Bay of Fundy. He sold this and removed to Thornhill, Ontario, twelve miles north of Toronto, where he died. His wife was Elizabeth Achsah Hollingshead and his children as follows:—Hannah, m. Bernard Vanderburg; John, m. Eliza Sturgis; Elizabeth, m. Samuel Lount; Sarah, m. — Williams; Daniel, d. single; George, d. single; David, m. Sally Yeomans; James, m. Jane Graham; William, m. Hannah Graham; Thomas, m. Elizabeth Wilder; Peter, m. Susan Fulton.

William Soule was captain of Canadian militia in the war of 1812 and fought in the battle of Queenston Heights. When General Brock was killed William Soule and his brother-in-law, Bernard Vanderburg, helped to carry his body from the field. Elizabeth Achsah Hollingshead, widow of Daniel Soule, was living in 1862, aged 93 years. It was said by a grand-daughter of Thomas Soule, twin brother of Capt. William Soule, in 1912 that descendants of Daniel Soule were living on the lands at Thornhill, near Toronto. The undersigned wishes to correspond with all descendants of their family.

AUGUST CANADIAN.

The Canadian Magazine for August is particularly strong in short stories by Canadian writers. "The Edict Upon the Wall," by Ed. Oahn, possesses fine snap and a good plot. "The Homecoming of Jim Saunders," by Lloyd Roberts, introduces an exciting log baring contest as an incident to a love affair. "Regan's Del," by Rene Norcross, displays the heroism of a half-breed girl in British Columbia. "Her Point of View," by George W. Hall, is a good western story of rivalry and love, while "The Rabbit," by D. Douglas Eppes, is an extremely strong and absorbing tale of sacrifice and stern sense of duty. There is a fine sketch of "Changing Halifax," by Archibald MacMechan, with pictures by Gyrth Russell; poems by Isabel Ecclestone MacKay, Ewyn Bruce, MacKinnon and Violet Orenar, with reproductions and paintings by the Canadian painters John Russell, J. W. Beatty, and Gertrude Des Claves.

Drs. Rolph and Lillian Langstaff who have been resting in Muskoka for the past few weeks expect to return home Wednesday evening the 6th of August.

DANGEROUS FALL.

Mr. Madden, one of the carpenters working on Mr. Crowhurst's new house directly back of the Standard Bank, had a severe fall Friday afternoon. The ladder on which he was standing tipped, and he fell to the cement floor in the cellar, a distance of twenty feet. His work mate, Mr. Sam Scholfield scrambled from the roof as soon as possible and found him unconscious. The doctor was at once called in, and he found that although he suffered from a severe pain in the head no bones were broken. After a few hours' rest he was able to walk to his boarding house, he spent Sunday with a sister in Newmarket, and yesterday he returned to his work on the house.

Maple.

There was a serious wreck at the Grand Trunk station at Maple Saturday night. Brakeman J. Wilson, about 23 years of age, was instantly killed in the caboose, fireman A. Hutchinson who failed to jump in time was very seriously injured; and engineer Harman sustained severe injuries when he jumped from his engine just before the collision. All three men were from Allandale homes. A way freight train was standing on the track when another south-bound freight train crashed into it. An engine and 15 cars were derailed, and all traffic had to be suspended. The accident is said to have been directly due to the failure of the way freight hands to protect their train. The fireman had both his legs broken, and one of them had to be amputated. Medical aid was secured, and the injured attended, and afterwards conveyed to the hospital. An inquest was held on the body of Wilson.
