Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock Mr. E. W. Moyle of Langstaff drove into the village with a Mr. Spaulding and another gentleman from Toronto, who had come out to inspect some farm property. In passing the Metropolitan station a car whistle blew, causing the horse to spring forward. The back seat of the rig on which the Toronto men were sitting overturned, and both went backwards striking their heads on the macadam road. They were quite stunned and dazed, and for a time could scarcely remember where they were. They afterwards returned home, and no bad results are feared, although the accident might easily have been fatal.
