

EDITORIAL

A discussion has taken place between The Star and The News regarding the holding of a General Dominion Election during the war. The Star argues that it would be almost criminal to divide the political parties at a time when all are busy with red cross and other patriotic work. The News is quite willing for the two parties to enter into an agreement to postpone the election until after the war, if the Liberal party will consent to defer the election for at least "two years after peace is restored."

Why doesn't The News make it five, or even ten, years so that its party may enjoy the reins of power for a good long time?

A significant sign of the rising tide of public opinion in British Columbia against the liquor traffic is to be found in a statement issued by John Nelson, Publisher of the Vancouver World, (Independent), in which he announces that his paper will undertake a definite campaign against the traffic. "British Columbia," the statement begins, "is shortly to be asked to prohibit the liquor traffic during the war. A convention is to be held in a few days and a campaign will then be outlined and plans for its prosecution made." The candid opinion of most sensible men to day is unmistakably in one direction, namely, that no country that is at war has any business permitting the continuance of a trade which imposes unnecessary burdens on industry and commerce and entails worse ravages than war itself.

Left Large Estate

John S. Elliott, who died suddenly at his farm at Newtonbrook, July 18, left an estate of $252,181. Most of the estate contained real estate holdings which included the Elliott House, corner Church and Shuter streets, and the Rosedale Hotel, corner Yonge street and Shaftesbury avenue. His widow will get one-third of the estate. The residue is to be shared equally between three sons, George B., Edward J., and Mathew J., all living at Newtonbrook. Hettie M. Adams of Newtonbrook is to get a gift of $500.

News Notes

Major-General Sam Hughes, Canadian Minister of Militia, has been knighted by King George. Sir Sam is now a Knight Commander of the Bath.

Six thousand two hundred harvesters left Ontario for the West in six special trains to help garner the crops.

Orillians have in a week subscribed and paid $15,000 to provide for ten machine guns and three motor ambulances, which will be manned largely by townsmen.

Quebec Province, after donation of more than $793,000 to Britain and the allies for war purposes, had a surplus for the last financial year of about $194,000.

Elgin Mills

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ground, the new host and hostess at the Elgin House, serve ice cream every Saturday afternoon and evening. Their patrons will receive every accommodation.

Mr. Charles Kerswill's new brick house, a short distance south of the Corners, is nearing completion, and looks well. Mr. Kerswill has the correct idea of wide verandahs and other conveniences.

There has been quite an exodus to the Canadian West from this section of country during the present season. The last to pack their trunks and take their departure are Mr. Whitty and Mr. Campbell.

Farmers are still struggling in their efforts to house their crops. The recent heavy rains have caused much delay, and farmers naturally wear at times an anxious face.

Mr. M. Moffit left on Saturday on the Harvester's excursion to the West.

The Canadian Magazine

The Canadian Magazine for September contains a valuable historical article by Professor W. P. M. Kennedy, entitled "Wolfe at Quebec." In fact, the number is remarkable for its historical interest. There are some new sidelights on Joseph Howe, by Francis A. Carman; an article on the trial of Anderson, the fugitive slave of the time of the American Civil War, by Frank Yeigh; a chapter entitled "The Glamour of the Fur Trade," by Dr. George Bryce; and from Mr. G. W. Bartlett there is an article dealing with early exploration in the Upper Stikine. There is also a sketch of General Sam Hughes by Britton B. Cooke, and a number of good short stories.
