stage that runs from post to post at intervals are the only inland manner of conveyance and are most restful. The houses are all built of coral. When a person wants to make a home, he just saws the blocks for the walls and the shingles for the roof out of the hole in his lot in which he finds most suitable for his cistern and builds his house, which is a great advantage in these days of high costs. The coral formation of the islands is very porous, therefore where ever there is either a low spot in the land or a grotto, the salt water appears and rises and falls with the tide. The constant wearing of the water in certain underground passages has formed some very wonderful caves hung with stalactites so grand and beautiful that one can only look on with admiration beyond words while going from room to room on pontoon bridges and think of the words of the Psalmist—"The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament sheweth his handyworks." After one has seen these caves and taken notice of the seeping of the salt water through the coral rocks, he can readily see why rain water is the only fresh water to be had for use in the homes. It is contained in splendid cisterns and because of the absence of smoke, it is as clear as spring water and is most wholesome.—To be continued.
