Chairmen of every committee are asked to report at this meeting. When you meet a friend, don't say "Go to the meeting" next Tuesday evening, say "come."

Jean Lasher's Death

The deepest sympathy is felt for Mr. and Mrs. Blake Lasher and family in the loss of their elder daughter, Jean, who passed away Tuesday morning, in her 16th year. Beautiful in character and person, with her evenness of temper and her kindness, she was a favorite with all who knew her, and her girl companions feel they have lost a true friend. It is truly hard to part with one so good, so young, so promising, but with a resignation divinely given we would humbly say "Thy Will be done," and pay a loving tribute to her memory. Besides the parents a brother and sister are left to share the loss. Interment will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Letter from D. W. Heise (Continued)

Saharra, Bhagalpur, Dist. India, March 22, 1922

I believe my last communication concerning my travel experience in the far east was dated from Bulawayo, South Africa, about Dec. 10, 1921. I also have some impression of mention having been made that my sailing from Africa to India on the 16th of Dec. as arranged might be delayed on account of two of our party being Americans, failing to secure proper credentials, permitting them to enter British India.

Well this is just what happened, and our residence in Africa was forced upon us for five weeks during which time the two of our party in question were left to "repent their citizenship." The necessary documents were finally forwarded from the office of the Imperial Secretary, and we at once wired our booking to the British India Steam Navigation Co., at Durban, and on the 21st of December we left Bulawayo for the East Coast, a distance of thirteen hundred miles, part of which was one vast plain like prairie without hill, rock, and very few trees. We passed through Johannesburg, just when the labor trouble had reached the boiling point, and shortly after, terminated in blood-shed. This city in point of altitude is the highest in South Africa, over 9000 feet. Continuing our journey from Johannesburg in our drop to the sea, we pass through some very beautiful scenery consisting of rivers, waterfalls, valleys, abrupt and rugged mountains, differing very much in character to those of the N.A. Rockies. We suddenly drop from mountain elevation into a broad valley, and find ourselves in Portuguese East Africa. Portuguese took charge of our train and demanded our right to enter Portuguese territory. We take a drop of 500 feet in five miles, and at 3.30 p.m., 24th, arrive at Deloogo Bay, where the S.S. Karigola lay ready for our embarking. In these days especially a traveller may, and often does, find it difficult in gaining entrance to a foreign country, and equally difficult to secure an exit. Ours was no exception to the present-day rule, but we finally succeeded in fully satisfying all the requirements. On paying out our money (this seems to be chief requisite) our ocean tickets were procured, and we boarded our boat of 7000 tons at 11 a.m. of the 25th for a sixteen days sail of over 5,000 miles to Bombay, India. We found an accommodation, second class, (missionaries are not supposed to travel first class, but some do); very good, all that could be desired. At 1 p.m. we loosed from the dock and sailed quietly out through the bay into the wide ocean once more. Before leaving Deloogo Bay. We may say that this is an old Portuguese city, with the present inhabitants a lazy indolent class, without apparently any aggressiveness, enterprise, or ambition, and everything shows old and dilapidated except the show and dance houses and the wine salons. This being the most convenient seaboard for Johannesburg, these people live from the mining activities of that city. The monotony of a long sea voyage was broken by calls at a number of ports up the east coast of Africa, the first one of which was Mozambique, the capital of a Portuguese province bearing that name, a city of 7,500 people, outside of which, on a small island, is an ancient fort of defence established during the fifteenth century, and now used as a prison for criminals.
