Rod And Gun

The story of Three Yankee Hunters who came up from New York to have some hunting in New Brunswick is well described by Charles E. Williams.

of New York, one of the party, in the March issue of Rod and Gun in Canada and all sportsmen will enjoy this narrative. For those who have never visited Jasper National Park, or for those who wish to renew their remembrances of this beauty spot, O. E. Trowbridge's well illustrated article on Jasper Park will be of particular interest. The March issue contains something to interest all lovers of hunting, fishing, shooting, and kennel interests, while there are articles dealing with many phases of our door life.

The day of churches "beyond denominations" is here, and we give herewith another example of pressing on the good work: The mayor of a far inland town was about to engage a preacher for the new church.

"Parson, ye aren't by any chance a Baptist, be ye?"

"No, not necessarily. Why?"

"Wal, I was just a-goin' to say we have to haul our water twelve miles."

Weekly Letter Feb. 16th, 1924

Although overshadowed perhaps in immediate interest by the Doherty-Ferguson squabble as to recognition in the Legislature for the Progressive group, the calculated effort of the Liberal Leader, W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., to draw out the Government as to just what it has in mind for the people in the way of an Ontario Temperance Act referendum was one of the most important items of last week's sitting of the House.

Mr. Sinclair's moderately toned and reasoning argument as to the rights of the electors to have some light shed on a matter which the prohibition element in the Legislature blame Premier Ferguson for maintaining a shrouded mystery met with some success. For, replying directly to the Liberal Leader's questioning on the subject, the Premier, in his reply made a first partial announcement as to the meaning of the reference in the speech from the Throne, that it heralded the bringing down of a bill to enable the Government to take a referendum when in its conception public opinion demanded it.

The Liberals remained interested spectators of the major row over Progressive recognition. Although the issue is regarded as one involving the Progressives and the Government, Mr. Sinclair has the opportunity of commenting upon the situation, afforded by amendment and amendment to the amendment subsequent to his address in the debate on the Address. He may, during the coming week, have something to say about it, although he has already publicly stated at Oshawa that Liberal recognition as an official opposition is not the result of any advances made by him or his followers to the Prime Minister of Ontario.

The Liberal leader in his address to the House gave no intimation of maintaining an unreasonable and unreasoning opposition to the Treasury benches. Instead he declared the attitude of his group throughout the session would be one of helpfulness where it was deemed the issue merited help, of constructive criticism where such was deemed in the best interests of the Province, but of strong opposition to the Government's advisory council on highways move if it involved payment of handsome salaries to members of the House for services in connection with that council's work.

Most of Mr. Sinclair's criticism was directed to the absence of reference in the Speech from the Throne to legislation heralding policies of financial retrenchment, of a comprehensive scheme of reforestation, and of social legislation, all matters which he believed of vital importance to the well being of the Province. He took the ground also that the Government was ill-advised in its creation of a $6,000 job for one of its followers to be special under secretary for Northern Ontario, and held that the elected members could best represent their various constituents.
