The Soliloquy of a Boot

(BY A. ROLFE)

The storekeeper knew his business. He had not been idle. Oh no. He told the man a lot about our insides and outsides which so delighted the man that he bought us. We were wrapped up and taken home by the man. After supper he took the wrappers off and showed us to his wife, praising us the while. He eulogized on the rakiness of heels. He extolled the contours of our foreparts. He elaborated on the slimmness of our waistline. He became quite hysterical over the snugness of our vamps, and was holding forth on the stability of our counters and back straps, when his wife—who had been a very attentive listener, made a remark that caused his circumference to visibly increase. "Why Henry," she said, what a splendid salesman you would make. You surprise me. I was not aware that you knew so much about boots.

"Henry replied, somewhat bombastically, 'I am afraid there are lots of things I know that you are not aware of. 'Oh! said his wife and what are they pray?' Never you mind, said Henry, and so the matter ended.

That night, and many succeeding nights, we were carefully put away. We had a good time, the man taking great care of us, polishing and rubbing, until we fairly shone, but the inevitable came, as it invariably does. One day the man was out on business, and it was raining pretty bad, so we got all wetted up. By the time the man arrived home we felt all out of shape, and like a wet rag.

The man took us off, looked us over, opened the oven door, and threw us inside, fortunately leaving the door open.

However we were not there very long, for just then the man's wife came in, and seeing him without his boots on, said "Where are your boots Henry, they must be wet." Yes they are wet all right. I have put them in the oven, replied Henry.

Good gracious, said his wife, that's no place to put boots, and fetching us out she put us under the sink. Well! that was no place to put us either, but we made no remark. What was the use? What should have been done is this: The man, when he arrived home and found us so very wet, ought to have taken some old newspaper and wiped us as dry as possible, then taken us off and filled our insides with some more old paper, then warming us slightly applied, with a piece of rag or an old tooth brush, some of the "Rolfe Brand Waterproof Dubbin" and then put us away in a dry corner.

In the morning he would have found us all ready to put on again, nice and dry, pliable and shapely. The old paper inside serving a twofold purpose—keeping us in shape and absorbing the moisture.

Efficiently simple isn't it, yet how many bother to do it?

Not very many. It's too much trouble in this age of impatience bustle. And there are those who don't know.

Another occasion I remember when the man was lacing us up, the lace broke. Did he send for a new pair? He did not. He tied a knot in the broken lace, and in trying to pull the knot through one of my eyelets, pulled out the eyelet.

The best lace on the market can be bought at the "Rolfe Shoes Repair Store" for 10 cents a pair, so why go around with knots in the laces. No self-respecting man would go to business with knots in his laces, at least I shouldn't think so.

About this time I began to notice that I, and my mate, were getting a bit wobbly, and over at the side.

The man didn't notice anything wrong. He simply put us on—went out—came home—took us off. Day after day this happened. Day after day we were getting worse.

The Greatest Service— The Least Attention

The "Toronto" Tower will stand for a lifetime because it is the heaviest, strongest and best-braced one built for any windmill.

There's no piece of farm equipment that gives so much service over so long a period with so little attention as a good windmill. That's why I recommend the Toronto Self-Oiling Windmill so highly. Lots of Toronto Windmills have given from eighteen to twenty years' service with practically no attention outside an occasional oiling and are still operating satisfactorily every day.

In the Toronto Self-Oiling Windmill all gears operate in a bath of special oil affected by neither heat or cold—every bearing thoroughly and automatically lubricated. New oil is required "only once a year."

If you already own a Toronto Windmill, I can give you this self-oiling feature by merely interchanging the head and using your present wheel. Most Toronto Windmills, too, can be made absolutely self-regulating in operation.

"New Series" Star

Star Car Models for 1924, now ready for delivery, are the outstanding achievement of the motor car industry this year. The "New Series" Star Car is as great an advance in the progress of motor transportation as the original Star Car introduced last year.

The "New Series" Star Car has all the advantages of the old. There is ample proof of performance ability. Although introduced only last year, the original Star Car has demonstrated its merits in the service of over 120,000 owners all over the world. And the "New Series" Star Car has greater claim to popularity than the old.
