Another Cave-In

A bad cave-in occurred at 6 o'clock Friday morning at the subway under the Canadian National Railway tracks, a mile south of Aurora. The Provincial Highway (Yonge Street) runs under the subway, and workmen were about to lay the radial tracks in position, the roadway having been paved when the cave-in occurred. No one was hurt, but three lengths of big sewer pipes which had been laid were lost in the disaster, and no amount of searching could find them. Where they got to is a complete mystery.
